The Summer Quarter.—The regular work of the Law School continues through four quarters yearly, the courses of the Summer, however, not extending into any other quarter. The Summer Quarter, 1918, opens June 17 and closes August 30, and is divided into two terms, the first of which ends July 24. Work may be taken for either term separately, subject to the rules about credit for courses that continue through both terms. See the statement under “Courses Offered,” below. The courses are substantially changed from summer to summer, and full work is provided for both advanced and beginning students. The former may continue their work during the summer, thus shortening the calendar time for the three-year course without reducing the period of actual residence; and beginning students may commence the study of law in the summer, to be continued either in the autumn or during the next summer. The courses to be given in successive summers are so arranged that either a first- or second-year student may take one, two, or three quarters in succession in the summer only. This plan offers particular advantages to school or college teachers intending to practice law who desire to complete part of their preparation for the bar before leaving their positions to enter a law school. The summer work also affords a special opportunity to students in other law schools who wish to do extra work for credit in their own schools, and to practitioners who desire systematically to pursue particular subjects.

Admission requirements.—Only college graduates or students who have had college work equivalent to three years in the University of Chicago are admitted as candidates for the degree of Doctor of Law (J.D.), which is conferred upon college graduates only.
