III. ORGANIZATION AND EQUIPMENT

GENERAL STATEMENT

The University of Chicago Law School was established in 1902. It aims to give a thorough legal training to students whose education and maturity have fitted them to pursue serious professional study. The method of instruction employed — the study and discussion of cases — is designed to give an effective knowledge of legal principles and to develop the power of independent legal reasoning. The course of study offered, requiring three academic years for completion, is not local in its scope, but constitutes a thorough preparation for the practice of law in any English-speaking jurisdiction. By taking advantage of the Quarter system (see "General Information," p.6, below) students may complete the course in two and one-fourth calendar years.

Only college graduates or students who have had college work equivalent to three years in the University are admitted as regular students, candidates for the degree of Doctor of Law (J.D.)* The University permits one year of law to be counted as the fourth year of college work, and confers an academic Bachelor's degree upon candidates for J.D. who have completed English-speaking jurisdiction. By taking advantage of the Quarter system (see "General Information," p.6, below) students may complete the course in two and one-fourth calendar years.

*This form of degree (Juris Doctor) has been chosen as appropriate for graduate professional work, after consultation with other graduate law schools and in the expectation of its adoption by them in the near future.
