IV. PROGRAMS OF ADVANCED STUDY

THE J.D. PROGRAM

The J.D. Program consists of three quarters of advanced and specialized work chiefly in the form of seminar and independent study. Programs are individually planned and may include work in various departments of the University complementary to the legal field of specialization. A program in taxation, for example, may include work in the Economics Department and the School of Business, Law School seminars on taxation, and a paper in the field of public finance. Each program for the J.D. degree will be supervised by a member of the Faculty of the Law School.

Work toward the J.D. may be done either after the completion of the basic three-year program or through summer study during the course of that program. A student may in this way complete both programs in three and one-fourth calendar years.

The degree of Doctor of Law (J.D.) is awarded to students who are holders of the LL.B. from the University of Chicago or a corresponding degree from an approved law school and who have been in residence for three quarters and have satisfactorily completed the program of work prescribed for them.

THE J.S.D. PROGRAM

The J.S.D. Program is designed for students with outstanding records who have demonstrated (usually by publications) special capacity for independent research on advanced problems in law.

The degree of Doctor of Jurisprudence (J.S.D.) is awarded to research students who have been in residence for three quarters, have pursued such studies as the Faculty has prescribed, and have submitted a dissertation which has been accepted by the Faculty as a creditable contribution to legal science.

V. ADMISSION OF STUDENTS

Application for admission to the LL.B. Program may be made by students who will have received a Bachelor's degree from an approved college or the A.B. degree from the University of Chicago prior to entering Law School. Students who do not plan to receive a Bachelor's degree before starting their law studies will be given the opportunity to qualify for admission on the basis of their performance on the University's General Education Test. Students with outstanding records may be excused from the General Education Test by the Committee on Admissions. Only in most exceptional cases will admission through the General Education Test be granted to an applicant who has not had three years of college work. Admission to the LL.B. Program will be in the Autumn Quarter only.

Applications for admission must be made upon a form obtained from the office of the Dean of the Law School. Official transcripts of all college records must be sent to the School. Students are selected principally on the basis of their
