GENERAL INFORMATION

The University of Chicago Law School was established in 1902. It aims to give a thorough legal training to students whose education and maturity have fitted them to pursue serious professional study. The method of instruction employed—the study and discussion of cases—is designed to give an effective knowledge of legal principles and to develop the power of independent legal reasoning. The course of study offered, requiring three academic years for completion, is not local in its scope, but constitutes a thorough preparation for the practice of law in any English-speaking jurisdiction. By taking advantage of the quarter system students may complete the course in two and one-fourth calendar years.

The Summer Quarter.—Regular courses of instruction are continued through the Summer Quarter, and its work counts toward a degree like that of any other quarter. The courses offered are substantially changed from summer to summer, and full work is provided for both advanced and beginning students. The former may continue their work during the summer, thus shortening the calendar time for the three-year course without reducing the period of actual residence; and beginning students may commence the study of law in the summer, to be continued either in the autumn or during the next summer. The courses to be offered in successive summers are so arranged that either a first- or second-year student may take one, two, or three quarters in succession in the summer only before continuing in a following Autumn Quarter. This plan offers advantages to school or college teachers intending to practice law who desire to complete
