The Student Body, 1954

Because Law School applications have more than doubled during the last four years, the work of the Admissions Committee has increased greatly. All applications are passed on by the Committee, which considers various factors, including college grades and activities, scores on the Law School Aptitude Test, and recommendations.

In many cases the Committee arranges a personal interview.

One hundred thirty-one students were admitted to the entering class for 1954-55. Thirty-nine states and eight territories and foreign countries are represented in the student body.
