

CORRESPONDENCE

The Editors invite correspondence in response to articles, essays, and book reviews published in the Review. Correspondence should be of moderate length and addressed to Articles Editors, Law Review, University of Chicago Law School, 1111 East 60th Street, Chicago, Illinois 60637. We cannot guarantee that all submissions received will be published; those that are published will be edited with the cooperation of the author.

The Fall 1990 issue of the Review included Professor Michael McConnell's article, Free Exercise Revisionism and the Smith Decision.¹ Professor William Marshall now critiques Professor McConnell's analysis, arguing against constitutionally compelled free exercise exemptions. Professor McConnell has a brief reply.
