

XIII. STUDENT ACTIVITIES

The University of Chicago Law Review, founded in 1933, is published by the School under the management of a board of editors composed of students. In the autumn of each year the fifteen members of the second-year classes who rank highest in scholarship are invited to become competitors for election to the staff of the Review. From this group the Board of Editors chooses the editorial and business staff of the Review.

The Board of Editors for 1938-39 was composed of the following:

Members of the Class of 1939: Ritchie G. Davis, Editor-in-Chief; Irving I. Axelrad, Paul M. Barnes, John A. Eckler, and Aaron Levy, Editors; Irving M. Feiges, Melvin A. Goldstein, Richard Hall, Sidney Karasik, Charles Longacre, Thomas M. Parker, Mary M. Shaw, and Alvin I. Weinstein, Associate Editors.

Members of the Class of 1940: Bernard Apple, ElRoy D. Golding, Robert Janda, Harold Kahen, Herta F. Prager, Francis Seiter, Seymour Tabin, Associate Editors; Edward H. Harsha, Business Manager.

The University of Chicago Law School Bar Association is an affiliated branch of the Illinois State Bar Association. Membership in the Association is open to any student in the Law School, and officers are chosen from the student body. A number of meetings are held each year, at which judges or distinguished members of the bar give informal talks upon matters of professional interest.

The Barristers' Club is a moot-court club which was organized in 1938 to afford its members training in the preparation of briefs and the argument of cases on appeal. The Club selects its members upon the basis of the record made in the moot-court course and in the annual examinations.

Four legal fraternities, Nu Beta Epsilon, Phi Alpha Delta, Phi Delta Phi, Wig and Robe, and one legal sorority, Kappa Beta Pi, maintain chapters in the School.