Two Special Programs

During the summer of 1965, students of the School participated in two special programs of unusual interest.

The Indigent Appeals Project gave fifteen students experience in the preparation of abstracts of record and briefs in criminal cases. The Project, carried out under the supervision of Marshall Patter, JD’56, a practicing lawyer, and members of the Faculty, undertook to provide assistance to the Public Defender of Cook County and private counsel representing indigent defendants on appeal. The Project was supported by gifts from the New World Foundation, the Chicago Community Trust, The Wieboldt Foundation, and a number of Chicago law firms.

The Summer Internship Program, supported by a grant from the National Council on Legal Clinics, provided opportunities for summer work by seventeen law students in a variety of agencies, such as legal aid organizations, neighborhood legal services offices, and public defender offices, with a view to broadening the students’ understanding of the problems and responsibilities of the Bar in areas not ordinarily part of the experience of young lawyers entering private practice immediately upon graduation.

Fellowship for Rheinstein

Max Rheinstein, Max Pam Professor of Comparative Law, is spending the academic year 1965-66 as a Fellow of the Center for Advanced Studies in the Behavioral Sciences, at Palo Alto, California. He is one of forty-eight scholars from thirty-seven different universities awarded fellowships. The Center, sometimes referred to as “the leisure of the theory class,” gives its visiting fellows an opportunity for a year of work at research of their own choosing, free of teaching responsibilities, administrative distractions or any sort of commitment to publish.

Professor Rheinstein joined the Law Faculty in 1935, as Max Pam Assistant Professor of Comparative Law; he became a full professor in 1942. He is a member of the International Academy of Comparative Law, First Vice-President of the International Faculty of Comparative Law, honorary professor of the University of Freiburg, and a Commander of the Order of Merit of the Federal Republic of Germany. He has received honorary degrees from the University of Stockholm, the University of Basel, the University of Louvain, and the University of Brussels.
