Students thinking of law study soon discover that the programs of most law schools have a great deal in common. The choice of one school over another is not easily made on the basis of catalog descriptions of the teaching methods, course offerings, and formal requirements. The similarity is natural, since most American law schools share the aim of educating lawyers for careers that may take many paths and that will not be limited to any particular state or region. Although many lawyers eventually find themselves practicing within some special branch of the law, American legal education is still fundamentally an education for generalists. It emphasizes the acquisition of broad and basic knowledge of law, an understanding of the functioning of the legal system, and, perhaps even more important, the development of analytical abilities of a high order. This common emphasis reflects the conviction that such an education is the best kind of preparation for the diverse roles that law school graduates occupy in American life and for the changing nature of the problems any individual lawyer is likely to encounter over a long career.

Within this tradition, which it shares, the University of Chicago Law School has been influenced by a special interest, imparted at its inception, in the relationships between law and other social studies and in the interaction of law with its social and human context. Important themes in the School's history and outlook can be suggested by a word about the beginnings of the University and of the Law School.

The University of Chicago, one of the youngest of the major American universities, was founded in 1890. The generosity of its founding donors, led by John D. Rockefeller, enabled the first President of the University, William Rainey Harper, to realize his bold ideas and extraordinary standards in the creation of a new university. Although the initial steps had come from the interest of the Baptist denomination in establishing a strong college in the Middle West, Harper insisted that the new institution must be a true university, with a strong emphasis on advanced training and research as well as undergraduate instruction. The University was launched with a program of ambitious dimensions and with a faculty of remarkable distinction. It became at once one of the leading universities of the world, "a new kind of institution, borrowing from the structure and aims of German and English universities, joining the gentlemanly tradition of zeal for good works of the New England colleges with the confidence and brashness of the Middle West." The character of the University from the start was stamped by a spirit of innovation, devotion to intellectual inquiry, and a strong sense of mission. As one study of American higher education has said, "No episode was more important in shaping the outlook and expectations of American higher education during those years than the founding of the University of Chicago, one of those events in American history that brought into focus the spirit of an age."

The Law School, part of Harper's original plan but delayed in its fulfillment until 1902, was a product of the same innovative spirit and concern for the common aims of a university. The objective, in the view of Harper and faculty members associated with him in the project, was to create a new kind of law school, professional in its purpose but with a broader outlook than was then prevalent in the leading American law schools. It was to be more than a training institution for admission to the bar, a view that prevailed despite the strong skepticism of, among others, Dean Ames of the Harvard Law School, who eventually assisted President Harper by lending Professor Joseph Beale to serve as Dean during the organizing period.

The aspirations of the new school were set by Harper's conception of legal education in a university setting: Education in law "implies a scientific knowledge of law and of legal and juristic methods. These are the crystallization of ages of human progress. They cannot be understood in their entirety without a clear comprehension of the historic forces of which they are the product, and of the social environment with which they are in living contact. A scientific study of law involves the related sciences of history, economics, philosophy—the whole field of man as a social being." The effects of this philosophy were seen in a number of developments in which the School had a leading role during its first half-century, including the growth of administrative law, legislation, and comparative law as recognized fields of law school study, the introduction of economics and accounting into the curriculum, the extension of the field of legal research from concern with the rules of law to empirically oriented investigations of the legal system, and the appointment of regular faculty members from disciplines outside the law. In addition, the Law School from the beginning established close relationships with the faculties in other departments of the University, a number of whom each year participate in the teaching of courses and seminars in the Law School.

The present program of the School seeks to combine a rigorous professional emphasis with the search for knowledge about law viewed as a social science. The School has long been noted for work in the field of law and economics, and it now is especially rich also in resources for the study of legal history. Other special emphases in recent years have brought the development of a leading Center for Studies in Criminal Justice and an extensive program of courses, seminars, and research on urban problems, in conjunction with the University's Center for Urban Studies. The strong orientation of the faculty toward research provides students with unusually good opportunities for independent research and writing and for employment during term time and summers as research assistants to members of the faculty. The School is the home of three faculty-edited journals—The Supreme Court Review, The Journal of Law and Economics, and The Journal of Legal Studies. The School also has close ties with the American Bar Foundation, a research institution affiliated with the American Bar Association, which conducts a broad program of research in law and its processes. The Foundation, located next door to the Law School, also employs students as research assistants.

The program for the professional degree (the J.D. degree) begins with a common program for all students in the first year, covering the basic common-law fields and emphasizing training in legal reasoning, legal research techniques, and exercises in writing various forms of legal documents, as well as an introduction to the arts of appellate advocacy. For most of the first-year work, courses are conducted for the entire class of about 160 in order to provide a unified experience in the foundation subjects. In one or two courses, however, the class is divided into sections. Students also meet in small sections for legal-writing work under the supervision of the Bigelow Teaching Fellows, an important feature of the School's first-year program. The first-year program also includes an elective course in the Spring Quarter chosen from a set of courses representing special perspectives toward law such as history, economics, and legal philosophy.

The work of the upperclass years is entirely elective and permits a fair degree of flexibility to the individual student in planning a program. The expectation is that all students will take work that gives them a strong foundation in the major subject areas, and will do substantial research and writing by taking advantage of the opportunity to cultivate special interests in seminars and independent study. A number of courses and seminars, considered especially appropriate for the third year, stress the solution of complex problems or transactions in the form in which they come to the lawyer in practice, drawing upon the theoretical knowledge previously acquired and calling for the application of that knowledge to real situations. Acquaintance with the techniques of litigation is stressed, through Trial Practice courses in which students carry out the steps in the preparation and trial of a lawsuit under the supervision of trial practitioners and judges drawn from the local courts. The program of the second and third years may also include a certain amount of course work in other departments and schools of the University.

A large proportion of the students engage in at least one intensive extracurricular activity that forms an important part of the educational experience. The School's Mandel Legal Aid Clinic provides exceptional opportunity for in-school experience in a particular kind of law office. The Clinic is one of the major legal-service offices in Chicago. Staffed by seven full-time attorneys who supervise the work of students, it permits about seventy students each year (thirty-five each from the second and third years) to have direct responsibility for the problems of actual clients, including participation in litigation. The Clinic's offices are in the Law School building. The recent opening of the affiliated office in the neighborhood specializing in legal representation of indigent criminal defendants offers opportunity for supervised clinical experience for an additional thirty students. There is an active moot-court program and competition, providing intensive training in the writing of briefs and practice in oral argument before appellate benches. The University of Chicago Law Review, one of the leading student-run legal periodicals, selects its membership partly on the basis of an open competition in which a large number of students participate during the summer between the first and second years; approximately 20 per cent of the student body are on the Review.

The School places a special value on ease of access to the faculty and informal exchange with the faculty as part of the educational process. The building is designed to encourage this atmosphere. Faculty offices are arranged around the working floors of the Law Library, which are used by both students and faculty. The custom is for students to drop in on faculty members at any time and without going through secretaries or other staff. A large lounge, in which students and faculty gather between classes and for coffee breaks, occupies a central place on the main floor of the Law School.

The School is housed in a set of buildings of noted architectural distinction, designed by the late Eero Saarinen and completed in 1960. They include an unusual courtroom complex, the Weymouth Kirkland Courtroom, in which actual sittings of the Supreme Court of Illinois and other courts and agencies are held each year. The Glen A. Lloyd Auditorium, with a seating capacity of approximately 500, is frequently used for lectures, motion pictures, concerts, and similar University functions. The Law Library, which contains over 300,000 volumes, is one of the leading law libraries in the Nation, especially strong as a research library and its collection of foreign legal materials. A large proportion of its seating is in the form of carrels and semicarrels spaced throughout the five floors rather than concentrated in a large reading room. The Law School complex, known as the Laird Bell Quadrangle, is completed by a residence hall, the Burton-Judson Courts, in which a large number of the first-year students and some upperclassmen reside and which is directly connected with the academic buildings.

The student body of the School has always been drawn from many colleges and parts of the United States. The alumni, numbering about 4,500, are widely dispersed throughout the country, with strong concentrations in New York, Washington, Los Angeles, and San Francisco as well as in Chicago. An active alumni program and a well-established Placement Office help assure students a broad range of employment opportunities upon graduation and during the summers between academic years.
THE DOCTOR OF LAW (J.D.) DEGREE

The regular or professional curriculum in the Law School is a three-year (nine-quarter) program leading to the degree of Doctor of Law (J.D.). The program is open to candidates who have received a Bachelor's degree from an approved college before beginning their study in the Law School and to a limited number of highly qualified students who have completed three years of undergraduate studies but have not received degrees. The Law School will not award Bachelor's degrees to such candidates, but in some cases undergraduate institutions will treat the first year of law study as fulfilling part of the requirements for their own Bachelor's degrees.

The entering class for the J.D. program is limited to approximately 160 students. All students begin the program during the Autumn Quarter in September. The calendar for the 1976–77 academic year is located on the inside back cover of these Announcements.

COMBINED DEGREE PROGRAMS

Students in the Law School may, with the permission of the Graduate School of Business, become candidates for the M.B.A. degree while pursuing their work toward the J.D. degree. By attending the Graduate School of Business during the summer quarters and by using certain courses in partial satisfaction of the requirements for both degrees, such a student may be able to earn both the J.D. and the M.B.A. degrees in four calendar years or less. For detailed information about these arrangements, applicants should consult the Dean of Students in the Law School.

Students in the Law School may become candidates for advanced degrees in other fields and earn credit toward such degrees by study during the regular summer quarters of the University. The Law School is flexible in granting leaves to those students who wish to pursue advanced degrees in other departments of the University in conjunction with their work toward the J.D. degree.

Beginning with the 1976–77 academic year, the University's Committee on Public Policy Studies, which includes several Law School faculty members, is offering a one-year program leading to the Master of Arts degree in Public Policy. The program is available to law students who desire to develop expertise in the area of public policy. The Law School will grant a one-year leave to any student who wishes to participate in this program.

THE GRADUATE PROGRAMS

The Law School has for many decades maintained programs of study beyond the first degree in law. In the 1960's the Foreign Law Program helped remedy the shortage of American scholars of foreign and comparative law, while the Comparative Law Program gave many students from abroad an initial exposure to American law and legal institutions. In the years since, the Law School has tended in its graduate programs to emphasize advanced scholarship in areas of particular faculty strengths. A small number of exceptionally qualified candidates continue to be admitted to Master of Laws and Master of Comparative Law programs in which course work predominates. For the most part, however, admissions and fellowships are directed to the support of students who have well-defined research interests. Such students may work as candidates for the advanced degrees of Doctor of Jurisprudence or Doctor of Comparative Law, but degree candidacy is not necessarily required. Graduate study at the Law School is designed, therefore, to provide considerable flexibility in matching the research interests of students and faculty.

Admission to the Graduate Programs, supervision of students' programs, and the administration of requirements for degrees are under the supervision of the faculty Committee on Graduate Studies. The grading system and the requirements for satisfactory academic standing applicable to students in the J.D. program are applicable to students in degree programs, except where higher requirements are imposed by the rules of the Graduate Programs. Students whose native tongue is other than English may receive extra time on examinations with the written permission of the instructor concerned.

THE MASTER OF LAWS DEGREE

The Graduate Program leading to the LL.M. degree is limited to students (1) who have obtained an undergraduate degree from an approved school of law, (2) whose undergraduate record displays high scholarly aptitude, and (3) who display qualities of maturity and serious purpose sufficient to justify the expectation that they will satisfactorily complete the requirements for the LL.M. degree. A student admitted to the Comparative Law Program may, at any time during his period of study in residence, petition for admission to candidacy for the LL.M. degree.

The degree of Master of Laws (LL.M.) is awarded to students who have been in residence for three full consecutive academic quarters, have completed their studies with a B average or above, and have satisfactorily completed in the course of their studies a substantial paper under the supervision of a member of the law faculty. To qualify for residence for a full quarter, the student must take and complete the equivalent of 12 or more course hours. Credit for 36 course hours and the maintenance of satisfactory academic standing are needed to qualify for the degree.

Students admitted to candidacy for the J.S.D. degree will be awarded the LL.M. degree following completion of the year in residence. Students who have been admitted to the J.S.D. program but are denied admittance to candidacy for the J.S.D. degree, and who have satisfied the requirements for the LL.M. degree, may be awarded the LL.M. degree upon recommendation of the Committee on Graduate Studies and favorable action by the faculty.

THE DOCTOR OF JURISPRUDENCE DEGREE

The Graduate Program leading to the J.S.D. degree is limited to students (1) who have obtained an undergraduate law degree from an approved school of law, (2) whose undergraduate record displays outstanding scholarly aptitude, (3) who at the time of their admission demonstrate well-defined research interests, and (4) who display qualities of maturity and serious purpose sufficient to justify the expectation that they will successfully complete the requirements of the doctorate.

The degree of Doctor of Jurisprudence (J.S.D.) is awarded to students who have been in residence for three full consecutive academic quarters, have completed their studies with a B average or above, and, after admission to candidacy for the degree, have submitted a dissertation that is accepted by the faculty as a creditable contribution to legal scholarship. To qualify for residence for a full quarter, the student must take and complete the equivalent of 12 or more course hours. Credit for 36 course hours and the maintenance of satisfactory academic standing are needed to qualify for the degree.

The dissertation must be submitted to the Committee on Graduate Studies within five years after the completion of the period in residence. To be acceptable, the dissertation must constitute a creditable contribution to legal scholarship and must be in publishable form. Three typewritten, printed, or duplicated copies must be deposited with the Committee on Graduate Studies not later than five weeks before the date of the convocation at which the degree is to be granted. Dissertations must conform to requirements of form established by the Committee on Graduate Studies and the Dissertation Secretary of the University.

THE COMPARATIVE LAW PROGRAM

The graduate Comparative Law Program makes available to a small number of highly qualified law graduates trained primarily in foreign legal systems the opportunity to acquire a knowledge of American law and legal institutions, to pursue comparative studies in their fields of special interest, and to engage in research in such fields. The degrees awarded in this program are the Master of Comparative Law (M.Comp.L.) and the Doctor of Comparative Law (D.Comp.L.).

Admission to the Comparative Law Program is open to students who are graduates of approved foreign law schools and whose credentials establish to the satisfaction of the Committee on Graduate Studies that they are qualified to undertake advanced study and research in law. Foreign law school graduates who have been admitted to the LL.M. program may, at any time during their period of study in residence, petition for transfer to the Comparative Law Program.

The degree of Master of Comparative Law is awarded to students in the Comparative Law Program who have been in residence for three full consecutive academic quarters, have satisfactorily completed their studies and are recommended for the M.Comp.L. degree by the Committee on Graduate Studies and by the faculty. To qualify for residence for a full quarter, the student must take and complete 12 or more course hours. The program is individually arranged with the student's faculty adviser and is expected to occupy the student's full time. At least half of the student's work in residence must be devoted to studies of Anglo-American law. Students will normally be expected to arrange their programs so as to include courses in civil procedure, constitutional law, torts, and contracts.

The degree of Doctor of Comparative Law is awarded to students who are graduates of approved foreign law schools, have completed with distinction the residence work required for the M.Comp.L. or LL.M. degrees and, after admission to candidacy for the degree, have submitted a dissertation that is accepted by the faculty as a creditable contribution to the literature of comparative law. Dissertations must conform to the requirements of form established by the Committee on Graduate Studies and the Dissertation Secretary of the University.

LEGAL HISTORY

The Law School is particularly rich in resources for the study of legal history. Several of the faculty are engaged actively in historical research and are available for advice and direction of reading and research. Academic offerings include courses and seminars in American Legal History, English Legal History, European Legal History, and Roman Law.

The Law School co-operates with the Department of History in offering a Ph.D. degree in legal history, under the auspices of the Department, as well as through the J.S.D. degree. In addition to the work of the curriculum, seminars and lectures by outside scholars in legal history occur regularly. The Workshop in Legal History, held quarterly under the auspices of the Leonard M. Rieser Memorial Fund, brings together faculty and students to discuss a scholarly paper on some topic of legal history.

LAW AND ECONOMICS

The Law School has long been the center of teaching and research on the application of the theories and methods of economics to legal questions. A number of courses are offered in this area; they are described in the section of these Announcements dealing with Curriculum. No other law school provides comparable opportunities for study and research in this field.

Since the Autumn Quarter of 1974, the Law School has made available to members of law school faculties a limited number of Fellowships in Law and Economics. Fellows spend between one and three quarters at the Law School pursuing individually tailored programs of study in the application of economics to law. The Fellowship program is designed to enhance the research and teaching capabilities of law teachers in this rapidly expanding field.

CRIMINAL JUSTICE STUDIES

To support research relevant to criminal law and criminal procedure, the School in 1965 established The Center for Studies in Criminal Justice. Persons with basic qualifications in law or the social sciences may apply to the Center for positions as Research Fellows. Typically a Fellow has completed law training or a doctorate in a related social science and comes to the Center with a well-defined research project and competence in research methodology. Fellowships are granted for one academic year and can be renewed. The probable quality and importance of the proposed research is the most important factor in selection of Fellows. Usually only one or two Fellows are appointed each year, to assure that each Fellow receives adequate support and guidance from the Center’s senior staff.

ADMISSION

Inquiries concerning admission to the Graduate Programs should be addressed to the Assistant Dean, Graduate Studies, The Law School, The University of Chicago, 1111 East 60th Street, Chicago, Illinois 60637. Initial inquiries concerning the Graduate Programs must be received by January 15 and applications for admission should be completed by March 15 before the Autumn Quarter for which the student desires admission.
CURRICULUM AND REQUIREMENTS

THE FIRST YEAR

Students in the first year take a prescribed program covering the five principal general branches of the law—contracts, torts, property, criminal law, and civil procedure. In addition to providing this general foundation of legal knowledge, the program is intended to develop an understanding of the process of development of the law through judicial decisions and statutory interpretation, and to cultivate the skill of legal reasoning. Instruction in the first year is based primarily on the so-called case method, centered on class discussion of judicial decisions. To assist the student in adapting to this characteristic method of law school instruction, the courses in Civil Procedure and Criminal Law are divided in the Autumn Quarter into three small sections, containing approximately fifty-five students each.

All first-year students also participate in the legal writing program, under the supervision of one of the five Bigelow Teaching Fellows. The work requires the student to become familiar with the standard tools and techniques of legal research and to write a series of memoranda and other documents representative of the lawyer's regular tasks. In the Spring Quarter each legal-writing section is divided into teams of students to prepare briefs in an appellate case and to argue the case before a panel of judges composed of members of the faculty and practicing lawyers. A prize, the Joseph Henry Beale Prize, is awarded for the outstanding written work in the legal-writing program. The Bigelow Fellows also serve as tutor-advisers on an informal basis, and offer practice in the taking of examinations. Under the arrangement of the first-year program, students will be examined on two courses at the end of the Autumn Quarter and three at the end of the Winter Quarter, thus providing the student with the opportunity to develop the skill of writing examinations at several stages during the year.

THE SECOND AND THIRD YEARS

All courses are elective after the first year. This policy does not reflect a view that subject matter is unimportant, or that there are not some subjects of greater general importance than others. Rather, it is intended to permit maximum freedom for each student to tailor his or her program to a considerable extent to his or her own interests and, to the extent that they can be foreseen, future needs. The expectation is that all students will take programs that give them a strong foundation in the standard subject areas of the law. It is hoped, in addition, that most students will find some area or areas that they want to pursue in special depth and breadth, either because of particular career inclinations or for the intellectual values that go with striving for the competence of the expert. The freedom of the elective policy puts a special responsibility on each student to consider individual interests and objectives and to plan a coherent program that meets those needs. Students are encouraged to consult with their advisers or other members of the faculty for additional guidance on their programs.

THE SECOND YEAR

Although no courses are required to be taken in the second year, there are certain courses that are commonly taken by a large proportion of students and have usually been taken in the second rather than the third year. These courses include Commercial Law I and II, Federal Taxation I, Corporations, Decedents' Estates and Trusts, and Administrative Law. When it is necessary to schedule upperclass courses in conflict with one another, these courses are not infrequently chosen for scheduling against courses most frequently elected in the third year.

The planning of a student's program will properly take account of the relationship of some courses as predicates for more advanced work in the same general field. In the field of business associations, for example, a second-year student should consider taking Corporations and Federal Taxation II, which would provide a basis for advanced work in the third year in such courses as Federal Regulation of Securities, Corporate Reorganization, and Business Planning. The course on Decedents' Estates and Trusts should be given special consideration for election in the second year, especially for students who will be interested in taking Federal Taxation III (estate and gift taxation) in the third year. Administrative Law has most often been taken as a second-year course, since it is a survey of general principles in the field and thus forms a background for understanding the operation of administrative agencies and procedures in a variety of special subject areas, such as labor law, securities regulation, taxation, public utility regulation, the communications industry, etc. Although Evidence is more commonly regarded as a third-year subject, students who plan to take one of the Trial Practice courses or to work intensively in the Legal Aid Clinic program may be well advised to defer some other subjects and take Evidence, and possibly Criminal Procedure, in the second year.

The program of the School emphasizes the interrelations between law and economics and seeks to equip students to use economic theories and methods in the solution of practical problems of law and public policy encountered in private practice, government service, or teaching. A prerequisite to some of the courses and seminars in the law-economics area is Law 422, Economic Analysis, unless the student has equivalent prior training. For this reason, and because of its value in a number of substantive law courses such as Antitrust, Labor Law, and Regulated Industries, Economic Analysis should be considered as a possible second-year course.

THE THIRD YEAR

The third year provides an opportunity for the student to round out his or her knowledge of basic subject areas and to take courses in fields of special or contemporary interest. It should also have distinct intellectual objectives. Three such objectives can be identified: (1) The taking of advanced courses or seminars in a field in which the student has acquired some foundation in the second year. An example would be the business or corporate area mentioned above. (2) The taking of courses that cut across subjects previously studied and emphasize the application of legal principles to concrete problems as they come to the lawyer in practice. Land Development, Business Planning, and the courses in Trial Practice are examples. (3) Studies, which may be thought of as cultural or perspective studies, that help give the student a broad and critical appreciation of legal institutions and their development. History, jurisprudence, comparative legal studies, and international law are examples. In particular, the School's increasingly rich offerings in the fields of law and economics and legal history afford an opportunity for cultivating a special dimension to legal studies.

WRITING

While there is no formal seminar or writing requirement after the first-year tutorial program, the policy of the faculty has been to provide wide opportunities for individual writing and research projects, either through seminars or through arrangements with faculty members for independent research supervision. Students are encouraged to make use of these opportunities. It is generally regarded as desirable for each student to have at least one and perhaps two experiences in law school in which she or he is called upon to produce a substantial paper based on intensive research on a limited topic or problem. For most students it may be well to consider including one such effort in each of the second and third years. Because of the special demands on the time of a student made by such a project, a student may ordinarily not be enrolled in more than one seminar at one time.

CLINICAL PROGRAM

In the second and third years, students have the opportunity to obtain practical training through the School's clinical program, in which students represent indigent clients under the supervision of staff lawyers. The program, which is organized as an extracurricular activity, operates through the Mandel Legal Aid Clinic, located in the Law School buildings, and the nearby Woodlawn Community Defender Office.

The Mandel Clinic renders legal assistance in civil cases, handling approximately 3,000 cases a year. Seventy students participate in its work, conducting weekly interviews and assuming responsibility, under the guidance of a director and six full-time lawyers, for the cases of the clients who are interviewed. Under Illinois law third-year students in the Clinic are authorized to appear on behalf of clients in the state courts. The program is intended to complement the academic study of law with experience in interviewing clients, investigating facts, dealing with adverse parties, and participating in court proceedings. In addition, it seeks to acquaint students with problems of professional responsibility and with the special problems of low-income groups. Part of the program is directed toward identifying legal remedies, such as test cases and other types of law reform, for recurrent problems that come to such a clinic.

The Woodlawn Community Defender Office, located within a block of the Law School, is a branch office of the Criminal Defense Consortium of Cook County. The Consortium has been designed as a model clinical program for the delivery through neighborhood offices of legal services to indigents charged with crimes. Thirty students in the clinical program and assigned to this office handle criminal matters under the supervision of a director and three staff attorneys. The office serves approximately 1,000 clients a year.

The clinical work is planned as a two-year experience. The first year is devoted to out-of-court aspects of practice. In the Spring Quarter of the year, participating students enroll in a seminar on Trial Practice. In the following year the emphasis is on experience in representation of clients in court and on problems of litigation.

REQUIREMENTS AND GRADING

To receive the J.D. degree, a student must have been in residence for nine full quarters, have maintained satisfactory academic standing, and have received credit for the prescribed courses and other required units of credit. A total of 135 course hours, or 33½ course units, is required. (Credit in the Law School is ordinarily measured in course hours but for certain purposes is expressed in course units. A single course unit is the equivalent of 4 course hours.) To qualify for residence for a full quarter, a student must take and complete 12 or more course hours.

To achieve credit for 135 course hours in nine quarters, a student must take an average of just under 15 course hours per quarter in the second and third years, for a total of 87 hours in those two years.
Since most courses and seminars carry 4 hours of credit, the requirement for graduation will usually be met if a student takes in each of the second and third years 10 courses and one seminar. A student may take more than the required number of courses and may take up to 17 hours in a quarter without special permission. Permission of the Dean is required to take more than 17 hours in a quarter. Each student is responsible for keeping informed of the number of additional credits he or she requires for graduation. In the course and seminar descriptions which follow, the number in parentheses at the end of the description represents the value of the course or seminar in course hours per quarter.

Students may, in their second and third years, take work in other departments and schools of the University for credit in the Law School. Such work may be counted for no more than 8 course hours toward the J.D. degree. Each student must receive advance permission to register in such courses from the Committee on Petitions and Academic Requirements, which will base its judgment on its view of the relevance of the proposed course or seminar to the study of law or to a career in law and of the appropriateness of the proposed course or seminar in the light of the student's course of study in the Law School. Students should consult the Dean of Students for information concerning the procedure to be followed for obtaining permission.

In each course, seminar, or other credit work the student receives a final grade according to the following scale: A, 80 and above; B, 74–79; C, 68–73; D, 60–67; F, below 60. (Grades are recorded as numerical grades in the Office of the Law School and as letter grades in the Office of the Registrar of the University.) A grade of 60 or above is required for credit for the work involved.

To maintain satisfactory academic standing, a student must receive a weighted grade average of 68 or more for the work of each academic year. In addition, a student who receives two failing final grades in any one academic year, or three failing final grades during his or her period of residence at the Law School, will not have maintained satisfactory academic standing. Maintenance of satisfactory academic standing is a prerequisite to continuation in the School as well as to graduation.

Regular class attendance is required as a condition of receiving credit for work done. The privilege of membership in the School may be withdrawn for unsatisfactory class work or attendance.

After the first four weeks of any quarter a student is not permitted to withdraw from a course, seminar, or special work for which he or she has registered that quarter except with the permission of the Dean of Students.

The degree of Doctor of Law cum laude is awarded to candidates who have satisfied the requirements for the degree with distinction. The achievement of a weighted grade average of 78 or better is considered to be completion of the requirements with distinction.

FIRST-YEAR COURSES

301. CONSTITUTIONAL LAW I. The function of constitutionalism, the institution and role of judicial review, the concept of jurisdiction, the role of precedents, the interplay of the various branches of the federal government within the framework of separation of powers, and the relationship between constitutional adjudication and its political, social and economic context. Spr (3). Mr. Casper.

302. CONTRACTS. The course will deal with the historical development of the enforceability of contractual arrangements, sanctions for their breach, and justification or excuses for nonperformance. The nineteenth-century elaboration of such basic contract doctrines as that of consideration will be examined in the light of their decline and fall in our own century. The relationship between contract liability and tort liability, taken as twin halves of a general theory of civil obligation, will be stressed. Aut (4), Win (4). Mr. Kromian.

303. CRIMINAL LAW. This course relates the general doctrines of criminal liability to the moral and social problems of crime. The definitions of crimes against the person and against property (as they are at present and as they might be) are considered in the light of the purposes of punishment and of the role of the criminal justice system, including police and correctional agencies, in influencing behavior and protecting the community. The class will be divided into three sections during the Autumn Quarter. Aut (3). Mr. Enker, Mr. Weigend, Mr. White. Win (3). Mr. Allen.

304. CIVIL PROCEDURE. The first part of this course concerns the formulation and defense of legal claims in civil litigation, with special reference to the adversary system and the role of the lawyer in it. It includes an analysis of pleading and discovery procedures and the right and function of jury trial. The second part of the course is a study of jurisdiction and the scope and effect of judgments, with an emphasis upon the problems imposed by a federal system upon complete determination of disputes that cross state lines; state court jurisdiction from Pennoyer v. Neff to present-day "long-arm" statutes; principles of finality of judgments and their implementation through the Full Faith and Credit Clause; proceedings in rem and quas in rem and interpleader and class actions as devices for extending judgments to the rights of persons beyond the personal jurisdiction of the court; the role of the federal courts under the diversity jurisdiction; the enforcement of judgments. For the first half of the course, the class will be divided into three equal sections. For the second half the course will be divided into two sections. Aut (4). Mr. Currie, Mr. Hellerstein, Mr. Stone. Spr (4). Mr. Laycock, Mr. Lucas.

305. PROPERTY. This course is an introduction to the legal problems relating to and arising out of the ownership and use of land. The first half will focus on the concept of "ownership" by exploring the restrictions imposed or permitted by the law on the owner's use of the land. The second half will focus on problems relating to the commercial transfer of ownership of land, with particular emphasis on the legal problems relating to financing the sale of land. Win (4), Spr (4). Mr. Dunham.

306. TORTS. A detailed study of the Anglo-American system of redress for physical harm to persons or property. The core of the course is the study of inadvertent infliction of physical harm, with special attention being given to the legal theory of negligence and to such concepts as causation, standard of care, the reasonable man, duty, contributory negligence, assumption of risk, and proximate cause. There is also a concentration on the common-law rules of damages for death and personal injury. A central theme is the tension between the negligence system and the areas of strict liability, including the emerging law on products liability. The course concludes with a survey of the implications of insurance and risk-shifting theories for the allocation of liability and with a study of proposals for auto compensation plans. Aut (3), Win (3). Mr. Epstein.

Elective. In the Spring Quarter first-year students will elect one course from among the following: Economic Analysis of Law, Public Law and the Economy, Jurisprudence, Defamation and Privacy. Preferences will be indicated in advance registration during the Winter Quarter. Where necessary in order to limit these courses to a reasonable size, enrollment by first-year students will be limited by lot.

308. Tutorial Work. Each first-year student is assigned to a tutor for individual and small-group work in legal analysis, research, and exposition, including an exercise in brief-writing and oral argument. Aut, Win, Spr (5). Mr. Epstein and Bigelow Teaching Fellows.

SECOND- AND THIRD-YEAR COURSES

400. Injunctions. A study of the distinctive characteristics, powers, and problems of a court of equity, with emphasis upon contemporary uses of the injunction as an instrument of social control and reform. The injunction is examined in a wide variety of litigative contexts—nuisance, labor, antitrust, First Amendment, racial discrimination cases—with the hope of formulating some general principles, both substantive and procedural, that govern their issuance and enforcement. (4). Mr. Lucas. [Not offered in 1976-77.]

401. Restitution. The course is concerned with the legal and equitable remedies for redressing unjust enrichment, and with the principles determining the availability of such relief in the varied contexts in which a claim of unjust enrichment may plausibly be asserted. The problems examined cut across, but are not limited to, contracts and torts: they include receipt of unsolicited benefits; gains obtained through the use of ideas originated by others; restitution as an alternative remedy in consensual transactions affected by fraud, mistake, and partial performance; and restitution of gains obtained through conduct that is independently tortious. Spr (4). Mr. Jones.

402. Redress of Certain Harms. An intensive study of the roles of the tort system in protecting against dignitary harms and umpiring competitive practices in the marketplace. Emphasis will be placed on the variety of categories through which the law has given protection against insult and indignity and the infliction of emotional harm, intentionally or negligently. There will also be special concern with the law of defamation and with the law on the protection of the right of privacy, with attention being paid to the emerging constitutional developments in both areas. The final segment of the course reviews the tort approaches to unfair competition and emphasizes especially protection against fraud, disparagement, and the appropriation of contract benefits, ideas, effort, and good will. (4). Mr. Katz. [Not offered in 1976-77.]

403. Equity. Equity is a sometimes incongruous mix of ancient maxim and dramatic innovation. It is impossible to understand equity without understanding its history, but equity has far outgrown its historical roots. Equitable remedies have been invoked in judicial attempts to completely restructure major institutions from public schools to oligopolistic industries, and to substantially modify the behavior of many more. This course will attempt to survey as much of this disparate material as possible, while focusing on selected samples for more careful analysis. After a brief review of the historical origins of equity, the historical distinctions between equity and law, and the historical limits on equitable jurisdiction, most of the course time will be spent on modern applications. The course will emphasize injunctions as the most important modern equitable remedy, but will survey other equitable remedies and devices. Among the more important questions to be posed are the following: Which of the historical notions still make sense, which are still applied by the courts, and which are only given lip service? What are the practical limits of equitable power to bring about substantial reform in other institutions? What are the substantive and procedural consequences of seeking equitable relief, instead of, or in addition to, legal relief? Win (4). Mr. Laycock.

405. DECEANTS’ ESTATES AND TRUSTS. The study of the various means of gratuitous transfer of wealth—by will, by inter vivos transfer, and by operation of statute on intestacy. Part I: The policy bases of inheritance and of the Wills Act formalities. Part II: The common will substitutes—gift, joint ownership, life insurance, revocable trust. Part III: Intestate succession, family protection, and mortmain legislation. Part IV: Testamentary capacity and the formalities of drafting and revoking wills. Part V: Distinctive constructional doctrines of the law of wills. Part VI: The creation and termination of trusts and the duties of trustees, executors, and other fiduciaries. Part VII: Charitable trusts and foundations, with emphasis on recent constitutional standards arising from litigation concerning racially restrictive trusts. Throughout the course the relevant portions of the Uniform Probate Code will be studied. Each student will be asked to draft a will and to submit an accompanying memorandum explaining its purposes. Aut (5). Mr. Langbein.

406. LAND DEVELOPMENT. This is an advanced real estate course, in which primary attention will be given to the various legal forms for raising capital for real estate ventures, alternative standards for measuring the rate of return on real estate investments, the impact of the tax laws on investment decisions, the problem of syndication, the strategies for dealing with use restrictions, and the role of government subsidies in the development of low-rent housing. The material for the course will consist primarily of prospectuses and case histories of various development projects, rather than judicial opinions. Spr (4). Mr. Epstein.

410. COMMERCIAL LAW I. The course deals with sales, negotiable instruments, documents of title, and documentary collections, with special reference to the Uniform Commercial Code. Emphasis is placed on problem analysis, counseling, and statutory construction. Aut (4). Mr. Priest.

411. COMMERCIAL LAW II. This course continues consideration of the Uniform Commercial Code. Particular stress will be placed on Article 9 of the Uniform Commercial Code, which deals with the method by which a consumer or business unable to obtain credit solely on the strength of a promise to pay may acquire goods or credit by giving a lien on personal property. Consideration will also be given to the use of letters of credit in both domestic and international trade. Commercial Law I is not a prerequisite. Spr (4). Mr. Kronman.

412. INSURANCE LAW. The law of the insurance enterprise: its institutional and regulatory framework, the relationship of insurance to the evolution of legal doctrine in torts and other areas, the uses of insurance, the law of the insurance contract. Win (4). Mr. Kimball.

414. LAW OF CONSUMER TRANSACTIONS. A study of major aspects of the law which governs contracts for sale of consumer goods, different types of consumer credit arrangements, and consumer credit regulation. The subject matter will be explored in conjunction with the common law, the Uniform Commercial Code, the Uniform Consumer Credit Code, the Federal Consumer Credit Protection Act, state and federal consumer protection statutes, and proposals for reform. The course will focus on problems of statutory interpretation and policy in meeting the needs, and reconciling the interests, of consumers, sellers, and financiers. Aut (4). Mr. Geva.
415. FAMILY LAW. The course will consider state regulation of sexual and family relationships, including entry into marriage, divorce, child custody, and the property incidents of formation and dissolution of marriage. The course will also survey the relationship between the state, parents, and children in the ongoing family, examining the legally unique roles of "parent" and "child" in constitutional, statutory, and common law. Win (4). Mr. Zimring.

417. EVIDENCE (a). The content and reform of the law governing proof of disputed propositions of fact in criminal and civil trials, with incidental treatment of other adjudicative processes, including burdens of proof, presumptions and judicial notice; the function of judge and jury and the preservation of errors for review; the hearsay "rule" and other rules of exclusion; the competency, examination, and privileges of witnesses. Aut (5). Mr. Meltzer.

418. EVIDENCE (b). (This is a repeat offering of Law 417.) Win (5). Mr. Stone.

419. CRIMINAL PROCEDURE (a). Study of the legal rules governing the operation of the criminal justice system, a multistage screening process by which society selects those to be punished for criminal behavior. Subjects include investigation of crime and acquisition of evidence by such means as electronic surveillance, search warrants, searches incident to arrest, and interrogation; custody of the defendant, including arrest, detention, release on bail; criminal pleadings, including complaint, information, indictment and plea; counsel and other defense resources for the indigent; function of screening devices, such as prosecutor discretion, preliminary hearing, grand jury, and guilty plea; motion practice and discovery in criminal cases; the criminal trial; post-trial motions and sentencing procedures; appeal and post-conviction proceedings. Win (4). Mr. Enker.

420. CRIMINAL PROCEDURE (b). (This is a repeat offering of Law 419.) Spr (4). Mr. Allen, Mr. White.

421. THE CRIMINAL JUSTICE SYSTEM. A study of the operation of the criminal justice system. The primary purpose is to study the operation of the criminal justice system as a whole and to understand its interrelationships; a subsidiary purpose is to train the student in the critical assessment of research data bearing on that system. Topics will include the organization and functioning of the police, the organization of prosecution and defense and the exercise of their respective charging and pleading discretions, bailing, jailing, sentencing, and corrections. Attention will also be given to the administration of the courts of criminal justice and the relationship between judicial administration and policing, sentencing and corrections. In addition to an examination, students will be required to submit an evaluation of a research project in the criminal justice system, discussing its methodology, validity, and utility. The course in Criminal Procedure is a prerequisite. Aut (4). Mr. Morris, Mr. Zimring.

422. ECONOMIC ANALYSIS. A systematic treatment of the economic theory of resource allocation. The topics covered are the theory of choice, the theory of the firm, the organization of firms under competitive and noncompetitive conditions, externalities, and the theory of factor markets. The course emphasizes the usefulness of economic theory as a tool for understanding real-world problems, and the relevance of economic theory to legal analysis. To this end, economic theory is applied to questions of the effects of laws, government regulation of the market, and conservation and pollution. Successful completion of this course will equip the student to take any other course or seminar offered as part of the Law and Economics Program. The course also provides useful background for courses not formally a part of the program—such as antitrust law, taxation, pollution, and labor law—to which economics is relevant. (4). Mr. Landes. [Not offered in 1976-77.]

423. ECONOMIC ANALYSIS OF LAW. A survey of the application of economic reasoning to problems in the law. The topics covered are the first-year subjects (property, torts, contracts, criminal law, and procedure), family law, the legal process (including legislation and law enforcement), and racial discrimination and other constitutional issues. No prior acquaintance with economics is required or assumed; the relevant economic concepts are developed in the context of particular legal questions. The text for the course will be the second edition of Posner, Economic Analysis of Law. Spr (4). Mr. Posner.

424. Economic Analysis and Public Policy. The application of economic analysis to public policy issues in the fields of antitrust, regulated industries, social cost, and property rights. The course is open to students who have taken Law 422, Economic Analysis, or who have had comparable prior work in economics. Students who have not taken Law 422 must obtain the permission of the instructor before enrolling in the course. (4). Mr. Coase. [Not offered in 1976-77.]

425. Personal Liberties and the Market for Ideas. An examination of policy toward areas of conduct in which it is commonly thought that government regulation should be severely restricted if not indeed prohibited, in particular, conduct covered by the First Amendment. The problems will be illustrated by considering the regulation of programming (including commercials) in radio and television. (4). Mr. Coase. [Not offered in 1976-77.]

426. Economic Analysis of Antitrust Law. This course will systematically apply economic analysis to the issues of antitrust law. The topics covered will include monopoly, cartels, patents, price discrimination, resale price maintenance, predatory pricing, tie-in sales, advertising, vertical integration and durable goods. The course is intended primarily as a sequel to Antitrust Law (Law 443) for those students wishing to pursue in greater depth economic concepts and the relevance of these concepts to antitrust enforcement. No prior knowledge of economics is required. Prerequisite: Antitrust Law (Law 443) or permission of Mr. Landes. Win (4). Mr. Landes.

427. Statistics and the Law. An introductory course on the theory and methods of statistical analysis and its applications in law. Both descriptive and inferential statistical methods will be treated, with emphasis on applications such as the weighing of uncertain evidence, the evaluation of social innovations, and the role and ethical limitations of controlled experiments in medicine. Topics will include estimation, hypothesis testing, and regression analysis and its interpretation. There will be a laboratory on applications to experimental and observational data in which interactive computation resources (remote consoles) will be provided. A year of college level mathematics would be helpful but is not essential. No prior experience with computational methods is expected. Win (4) Mr. Meier, Mr. Zabell.

428. Accounting. The course is primarily concerned with a study of the major topics making up the body of "generally accepted accounting principles" and the manner in which they enter into legal problems. Introductory material on the record-keeping process and form of financial statements is followed by an analysis of major problem areas: revenue recognition, inventory accounting, depreciation, accounting for debt instruments and for corporate capital. The course is concluded with a section on analysis and interpretation of financial statements. Published corporate financial reports, Opinions of the Accounting Principles Board of the American Institute of CPA's, and Accounting Series Releases of the SEC are used as the basic accounting materials for analysis. (4). Mr. Davidson. [Not offered in 1976-77.]

429. Corporation Law (a). This course considers the nature of the modern business corporation, including small privately held or closed corporations and large publicly held corporations; the role of the modern corporation in the collection and allocation of capital and the relation of the securities laws, corporation laws, and the institutionalized processes of distributing securities to that function; the promotion and organization of corporations; the distribution of power between managers and stockholders; the fiduciary obligations of managers to stockholders and of stockholders among themselves; the proxy device and its regulation; the control of insider trading and profit-taking; the combination of corporations; methods and machinery for protecting stockholders' rights, through derivative suits and otherwise. Aut (5). Mr. Filiis.

430. Corporation Law (b). (This is a repeat offering of Law 429.) Win (5). Mr. Kaplan.

431. Federal Regulation of Securities. This course deals with federal regulation of selling, trading, and dealing in securities in accordance with the provisions of the Securities Act of 1933 and the Securities Exchange Act of 1934, together with a consideration of the effect of such laws upon the law of corporations, except to the extent that such matters are considered in the course in Corporation Law. The latter course is a prerequisite. Aut (4). Mr. Kaplan.

432. Corporate Readjustments and Reorganizations. This course considers the adjustment of the rights of shareholders in connection with mergers and also by charter amendment and voluntary exchanges of securities, including the rights of dissenting shareholders through appraisal evaluation proceedings. It then deals with the problems encountered in adjusting debt, especially in the face of financial stress, and in rearranging the rights of shareholders in distress situations. Attention is directed to the standards of fairness imposed by law on modification of shareholders' rights and rearrangement of relationships between debtor and creditors and among creditors in these various situations. The standards for reorganization in a bankruptcy proceeding are contrasted with the rules of fairness applied where readjustment is voluntary or is compelled by something other than the debtor's financial difficulties. Attention is also directed to the factors in our society which encourage the use of debt or equity capital. Corporation Law is a prerequisite. Spr (4). Mr. Blum.

433. Business Planning. The aim of this course is to apply the student's knowledge of taxation and corporation law to the solution of a series of transactional problems involving typical steps in corporate formation and rearrangement. The problems include the formation of a closely held corporation, the formation of a publicly owned corporation, stock redemption, the sale of a business, merger and other types of combination transactions, and recapitalization, division, and dissolution of corporations. Both small-group discussions and lectures will be employed. Students will be assigned to represent the interests of particular parties, negotiate transactions, and prepare the necessary documents. The student must have taken Corporation Law and Federal Taxation II. Spr (4). Mr. Krane. Mr. Hess.

434. Fiduciary and Professional Responsibility. This course will deal with various aspects of the concept of fiduciary obligation in the manifold forms in which it is found in American law: agent-principal, employer-employee, partnership, corporate director, majority stockholder, trustee-beneficiary, investment adviser-advisee, lawyer-client, etc. In exploring the effect of the concept in the lawyer-client relationship, extended attention will be given to the many manifestations of the lawyer's obligation to his client and to the requirements and ethical aspirations in recognized principles of legal ethics expressed in the Code of Professional Responsibility of the American Bar Association. Spr (4). Mr. Kaplan.

435. Federal Taxation I. A tax on the income of persons, with rates graduated upward, is the most significant element in the tax system adopted by the federal government. This first course in federal taxation examines the structure of the current version of the income tax. It emphasizes the problems of determining what is to be treated as gross income for purposes of the tax, what offsets are to be allowed in arriving at the amount of net income upon which the tax is imposed, who will be required to include various items in income or be allowed to claim various deductions, and when these factors are to be reflected in computing income. Particular attention is devoted to the treatment of gains and losses.
from changes in the value of property. Five central questions are continuously under examination: (1) To what extent do tax rules mean something other than they appear to mean? (2) What policies underlie the mass of technical detail which characterizes the law? (3) How much change in conduct is needed to alter the tax consequences involved in pursuing various goals? (4) What criteria can be found for choosing among alternative tax policies under a progressive income tax? (5) Can one discover any directions in which tax policies and tax law are developing? Aut (4). Mr. Blum.

436. Federal Taxation II. This course builds upon the basic relationships and concepts looked at in Federal Taxation I. It deals primarily with the treatment of business profits under the income tax. The taxation of income generated by sole proprietorships and the problems of allocating the profits of a partnership to the partners for tax purposes are explored. The major part of the course is devoted to analyzing our dual system of taxing the incomes both of corporations and of their shareholders. Attention is particularly focused on the problems and consequences of taxing business income to an artificial entity as compared to taxing it directly to the owners of that entity; on the importance of tax considerations in business decisions; and on evaluating alternative policies for treating corporate profits under a tax system which subjects personal income to rates graduated upward. Win (4). Mr. Blum.

437. Federal Taxation III. The principal objective of this course is an examination of the federal estate and gift tax law and federal income taxation of decedents’ estates and trusts. The course includes a study of various arrangements for the devolution of wealth, applying principles of the law of wills, trusts, future interests, and tax. The course seeks to develop an understanding of the process of estate planning or choosing between alternative means of accomplishing client objectives regarding property disposition. Proposals for reform of the federal estate and gift tax law will be examined and compared to the existing law. Spr (4). Mr. Hellerstein.

438. State and Local Taxation. A study of the problems that arise in connection with the imposition of taxes by state and local governments in the context of a federal system. The course examines typical state property, income, and sales tax problems; federal constitutional restraints on state tax power; apportionment of tax resources among governmental units; and efforts to achieve uniformity among the states. Win (4). Mr. Hellerstein.

439. Labor Law I. The legal framework for collective bargaining, strikes, picketing, boycotts, lockouts, and other forms of self-help, examined in the context of pertinent historical, social, and economic considerations; regulation of the organizational process, selection of representatives for collective bargaining, and negotiation, administration, and enforcement of collective agreements; the relationships of the NLRB, courts, and Congress; problems of federalism. Win
(4). Mr. Meltzer.

440. Labor Law II. A more intensive examination of the enforcement of collective agreements, including the grievance-arbitration process and its coordination with external law; protection of individual interests in the negotiation and administration of collective agreements; the overlap and conflict between fair employment legislation, labor arbitration and the regulation of labor-relations; protection of the community against intolerable stoppages; collective action and public employees; union government and administration, including admission, discipline, elections, fiduciary obligations; professional and ethical obligations in the tripartite relationships involved; inter-union relations; the regulation of political expenditures. Labor Law I (or the consent of the instructor, which will be given only in unusual situations) is a prerequisite. Spr (4).
Mr. Meltzer.

441. Antitrust Law I. An introduction to the law and economics of antitrust.
After a brief consideration of the common law of restraint of trade and the basic antitrust statutes, the course focuses on the practices by which competing firms eliminate, or are alleged to eliminate, competition among themselves. The practices considered include formal cartels, price-fixing conspiracies, "conscious parallelism," trade association activities, resale price maintenance, cross-licensing of patents, and mergers to monopoly and other types of horizontal merger. No prior knowledge of economics is assumed. The text is Posner, Antitrust: Cases, Economic Notes, and Other Materials (1974) (4). Mr. Landes, Mr. Posner. [Not offered in 1976-77.]

442. ANTITRUST LAW II. A continuation of Antitrust Law I. The focus of the course is on the practices by which firms exclude or are alleged to exclude actual or potential competitors from their markets. Among the practices considered are boycotts, tying arrangements and reciprocal buying, vertical integration, and price discrimination under the Robinson-Patman Act. Vertical and conglomerate mergers, and the modern cases dealing with the offense of monopolization, are discussed. Also considered are the procedural aspects of the private antitrust case. The text is Posner, Antitrust: Cases, Economic Notes, and Other Materials. Antitrust Law I (or the consent of one of the instructors) is a prerequisite. (4). Mr. Landes, Mr. Posner. [Not offered in 1976-77.]

443. ANTITRUST LAW. This course covers the Sherman Antitrust Act and related federal legislation for controlling the structure and competitive practices of American industry. It explores the legal significance of such concepts as price-fixing, boycotts, monopoly and oligopoly, coercion, leverage, vertical integration, and market foreclosure, and their application to contemporary problems including corporate mergers and restrictive methods of distribution used by single firms. Parallel with the study of legal doctrine, the course examines whether the evidence and the judicial opinions in key cases provide satisfactory economic explanations for the observed business behavior and its assumed effects. Aut (4). Mr. Neal. [This course is a one-quarter alternative to the two-quarter sequence in antitrust law, Law 441-442.]

445. REGULATED INDUSTRIES. An introductory survey course dealing with statutes controlling entry, price, and performance of private firms. Institutions studied include franchises, certificates of public convenience and necessity, lease or sale of government property, government procurement, competitive bidding, maximum and minimum price controls, and safety standards. The course will emphasize federal statutes and those industries—transportation, communications, oil and natural gas, and agriculture—subject to pervasive federal regulation. Spr (4). Mr. Kitch.

446. LEGAL REGULATION OF THE COMPETITIVE PROCESS. The course deals with federal and state laws designed to protect against unfair competition and the federal law of copyrights, patents, and trademarks. Protections against the dissemination of misinformation and protections accorded to interests in information and ideas having economic value, such as inventions, literary, musical, and other artistic works, designs, commercial symbols, and trade secrets, are studied. An aim of the course is to evaluate the law's accommodations between the competing goals of encouraging innovation and creativity, protecting the reliability of commercial communication, and preserving freedom of trade. Aut (4). Mr. Kitch.

447. ADMINISTRATIVE LAW. Administrative law is the law that governs administrative agencies, including executive departments, in their complex tasks of carrying out governmental programs. Governmental control of private activities, especially of economic life, seems to be everywhere increasing. Legislative bodies determine the general programs, and agencies make them more specific through making rules, adjudicating cases, investigating, prosecuting, and supervising. The main focus of administrative law is on procedural safeguards and on the allocation and control of power, including the structuring, checking, and confining of discretion. A central inquiry repeated in many contexts is how to accommodate procedural fairness to the efficient accomplishment of legislative purposes. The constant quest is for understanding principles of exertion of governmental power and principles of justice that cut across functions of federal, state, and local agencies and their relations with reviewing courts and with legislative and executive authorities. Spr (4). Mr. Currie.

448. Public Law and the Economy. The impact of governmental institutional arrangements on the economy will be studied. The focus will be on procedural and jurisdictional rules affecting economic policy, including the budget, monetary policy, and regulation of business. The course will deal extensively with rules bearing on checks and balances among the three branches of the Federal government. Among the sources of such rules are the Constitution, comprehensive statutes such as the Congressional Budget and Impoundment Control Act, and custom (sometimes reflected in statutes). Attention will be devoted to the status of independent agencies, the procedures and committee structure of the Congress, and the role of agencies in the Executive Office of the President, such as the Office of Management and Budget. Other topics include the Freedom of Information Act and the role of the courts in economic policy decisions. Spr (4). Mr. Dam.

450. Constitutional Law II. Freedom of Expression. A detailed study of problems of freedom of speech that have a constitutional dimension, including such topics as prior restraints, obscenity, the right of privacy, libel, group libel, fair trial and free press, congressional investigating committees, loyalty oaths, compulsory disclosure laws, sedition, public-issue picketing, symbolic conduct, and protest in public places. Spr (4). Mr. Stone.

451. Constitutional Law III: The Constitution and Equality. The course will focus on the development of the equal protection clause and, especially, on the recent emergence of the concept of "substantive" equal protection. Particular attention will be paid to the legacy of the Reconstruction Amendments for nonwhites, the poor, and women, in education, voting, legislative reapportionment, housing, employment, and the criminal process. Win (4). Mr. Neal.

453. Urban Government. The course is concerned with the legal problems of administration of a local government. Special emphasis is given to the problems of supervision by the judiciary and by higher levels of government. The course also considers the issues raised by proposals for greater decentralization (community participation) and for greater centralization (metropolitan government) of local government structures. Win (4). Mr. Lucas.

455. Federal Jurisdiction. An examination of the jurisdiction and powers of the federal courts as defined largely by the Judiciary Code and by the Constitution. Subjects emphasized include the diversity, federal-question, and admiralty jurisdictions, Supreme Court review and habeas corpus; governmental immunity, abstention, three-judge courts, and injunctions against suit. Class discussions will focus in large part upon recent decisions in the light of casebook readings. Win (4). Mr. Currie.

456. Admiralty. Historical development of "cases of admiralty and maritime jurisdiction" as an element of the jurisdiction of the federal district courts; the role of the Supreme Court in the "common law" development of the substantive law of the admiralty; a brief introduction to the main elements of the substantive maritime law: the maritime lien, maritime torts and contracts, salvage, general average, and limitation of liability. Aut (4). Mr. Lucas.

457. Conflict of Laws. An inquiry into the division of lawmaking and judging authority among the several states and between the states and the federal government, principally through consideration of choice of law, personal jurisdiction, and respect for prior judgments in cases connected with more than one state. Spr (4). Mr. Beardsley.

460. Jurisprudence. An investigation of different concepts of law designed to enable students to examine critically their explicit and implicit theories about the nature and function of law and of state. The concepts of rule, obligation, and authority will be reviewed in the context of a study of the idea of a legal system. The limits of sanctions and of other enforcement strategies will also be examined. An attempt will be made to contrast political and legal decision making. Spr (4). Mr. Gottlieb.

461. STUDIES IN ARGUMENT. An examination of a series of legal and nonlegal texts, varying somewhat from year to year, in an attempt to work out a way of elaborating what is meant when an argument (or other statement defining and supporting a position) is labeled good or bad. What is meant, for example, by saying that a good argument should be "rational"? Are there ways in which competing statements of value can be judged other than by simply stating one's own preferences in conclusionary ways? We shall explore such questions as: "How do we change our minds about important public questions?"; "What is it that we admire when we approve of a statement—say a judicial opinion—with the conclusion of which we disagree?" The concerns of the course will be to work out some sense of what is meant by excellence in discourse about matters of public concern; a language in which to explicate and criticize what is read; and an improved capacity to engage in such discourse as participants. Readings will include works by Thucydides, Plato, Burke, Paine, Hamilton, Chief Justice Marshall, and Thoreau. Win (4). Mr. White.

462. COMPARATIVE LAW: THE FRENCH LAW OF OBLIGATIONS. An introductory course in the law of a modern continental legal system. After an historical introduction to the French system of private law and a survey of the principal law-making and adjudicative institutions of modern France, an examination of selected aspects of the law of obligations (contract, delict, unjust enrichment) will provide a basis for the comparative study of the structure, sources, and techniques of the French system with emphasis on the role of the courts in a codified system and the impact of economic legislation on the private bargain. Translated materials will be used. Students with a knowledge of French may, with the consent of the instructor, substitute a paper for the examination. Win (4). Mr. Beardsley.

463. DEVELOPMENT OF LEGAL INSTITUTIONS. An introductory course in the historical background of the modern Anglo-American common law, focusing on the principal structural elements which developed during the Middle Ages and the Renaissance: the jury system; common law criminal procedure; the forms of action; the bar, the yearbooks, and the treatises; illustrative doctrinal development: trespass, case, and assumpsit; the rise of equity; prerogative justice in Council, Admiralty, and Star Chamber; the battle of the courts; the transformation of the juries and the development of the law of evidence; the recasting of criminal procedure: investigation, prosecution, and defense; the origins of the privilege against self-incrimination; the deterioration of Chancery procedure and the fusion of law and equity; and the early history of judicial review of administrative action. (4). Mr. Langbein. [Not offered in 1976-77.]

464. AMERICAN LEGAL HISTORY. This course deals with selected problems in the development of private and public law in the United States. Among the topics studied are: the Salem witch trials of 1692-93; the emergence and disappearance of the law of seditious libel in early American history; the growth of tort law and the emergence of the negligence doctrine in the early nineteenth century; the Americanization of the doctrine of conspiracy and its application to labor law; the desegregation of public high schools and the South after 1954. Emphasis is on law as a product of socioeconomic change rather than as a system of reasoning. Course work centers upon intensive examination of judicial and legislative source materials. A paper is required of all students. (4). Mr. Katz. [Not offered in 1976-77.]

465. COMPARATIVE LEGAL INSTITUTIONS: EUROPEAN LEGAL INSTITUTIONS. A course designed to acquaint students of Anglo-American law with the principal institutions of European legal systems. Part I: The significance of codification. Part II: The law professionals, with emphasis on legal education, the structure of the bar, and judicial selection. Part III: German criminal procedure. Part IV: French administrative procedure. Part V: Italian civil procedure. Part VI: Allocating the costs of litigation in Germany and England. The unit on criminal procedure will be emphasized. A recurrent issue is the extent to which Continental institutions can serve as models for the reform of troubled aspects of American practice. The course materials are in English. Students with adequate command of French, German, or Italian may substitute a research paper for the examination. (4). Mr. Langbein. [Not offered in 1976-77.]

466. LAW OF THE EUROPEAN COMMUNITY. The course will examine the history of the European communities, the nature of community lawmaking, and the relationship between community law and the law of the member countries, as well as questions concerning harmonization of laws. In addition to studying the legal, political, and economic development of this new type of international (supranational? federal?) organization, the course will attempt to analyze its impact on the “outside” world. Aut (4). Mr. Casper.

467. INTERNATIONAL LAW. Students will be acquainted with the nature and functions of law in a system devoid of effective adjudication and enforcement techniques. The basic course in international law is designed to familiarize students with the character and nature of law applicable in relations between states and in international organizations. Emphasis will be placed on the position of individuals in the international legal order, the legal control of international conflicts, and the character and function of United Nations organs. Aut (4). Mr. Gottlieb.

468. INTERNATIONAL ECONOMIC INSTITUTIONS. Since World War II a large number of regional and international organizations have been created. In the economic arena these institutions have been particularly influential. The course will focus on the interaction between long-standing, constantly evolving international economic problems and these new institutions. Emphasis will be placed on the ways in which legal rules and institutional forms can influence economic outcomes. The principal institutions examined will be the International Monetary Fund and the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade. Aut (4). Mr. Dam.

INDEPENDENT STUDY

499. INDIVIDUAL RESEARCH. In addition to the opportunities for writing of research papers afforded in many of the seminars listed below, second- and third-year students may earn course credit by independent research under the supervision of a member of the faculty. Such projects (commonly known as “499 papers”) are arranged by consultation between the student and the particular member of the faculty in whose field the proposed topic falls. Special rules regarding credit, permission, and requirements for submission of written work are set forth in the regulations of the Law School. Students wishing to register for 499 credit should consult the Dean of Students.

Written work is not a formal requirement for the J.D. degree, but students are encouraged to include some such work in their programs and most students do so, either through participation in a seminar or through 499 credit. Students are encouraged to submit outstanding papers for publication in the Law Review or in other legal periodicals.

Before being granted permission to register for 499 work the student must submit a précis of his or her proposed study to the supervising faculty member. In considering possible fields or topics for such projects, students may wish to consider seminars described below but listed as not offered in the current year and to consult the instructors concerned as to the possibility of independent work in those fields.

SEMINARS

No more than twenty students will ordinarily be admitted to a seminar, and in some seminars enrollment is limited to a smaller
Students will be given an opportunity to sign tentative registration lists for seminars. Selection of enrollment where necessary will be by lot or by a method to be determined by the instructor. Students are not permitted to register for more than one seminar in a quarter except with the permission of the Dean of Students.

500. Seminar: Class Actions. The seminar will be devoted to a study of the contemporary use of the class action in federal and state courts, with special attention to problems arising under Federal Rule 23 and the possible need for its revision in the light of the Supreme Court’s decision in the Eisen case. Win (4). Mr. Lucas.

501. Seminar: Section 1983 Civil Rights Litigation. The seminar will examine the use of the Ku Klux Klan Act of 1871 by private litigants to seek redress for violations of their civil rights. Initially the elements of the cause of action, defenses, immunities and remedies will be analyzed. The seminar will then consider litigation strategies used by civil rights lawyers to increase the availability and effectiveness of civil rights remedies. Throughout the seminar selected briefs and documents from cases pending on the Section 1983 dockets of the Mandel Legal Aid Clinic, and the Woodlawn Community Defender Office will be examined to see how some of these strategies are currently being applied in the Seventh Circuit. Students will be encouraged to select a topic for the written paper suggested by the discussion of pending cases. The seminar will be open only to third-year students. Students should have taken or be enrolled in courses in federal jurisdiction, constitutional law and injunctions. Win (4). Mr. Palm.

506. Seminar: Real Estate Development. The seminar will explore selected current problems in real estate development, including financial and tax aspects. The courses in Land Development and Federal Taxation II are prerequisites. (4). Mr. Blum. [Not offered in 1976-77.]

507. Seminar: Land-Use Planning. The seminar will consider land-use planning from the legislative viewpoint. It will explore problems of framing and implementing statutory provisions to control the development or nondevelopment of land, with special attention to the American Law Institute’s Model Land Development Code. Win (4). Mr. Dunham.

508. Seminar: Housing Policy. The seminar will explore the federal policies and techniques for implementation concerning housing and the relationship of these policies with state and local housing policy and implementation. While emphasis will be on low cost housing, special group housing such as housing for the elderly and for government personnel will also be examined. (4). Mr. Dunham. [Not offered in 1976-77.]

509. Seminar: Legal Problems of City Planning. This seminar will examine selected legal problems encountered in the work of the municipal Plan Commission, such as coordination of various public programs with a comprehensive city plan; administration and determination of planned development issues; creation of multi land use, special zoning districts; collaboration of the comprehensive plan and the annual city capital budget; and the role of the city Plan Commission in the environmental impact field. Aut (4). Mr. J. Levi.

510. Seminar: Urban Powers of Home Rule. An examination of the relations of municipal powers to the powers of state and federal governments. Particular attention will be devoted to the differences in application and doctrine as between “home rule” municipalities and conventional limited municipal powers. Spr (4). Mr. J. Levi.

511. Seminar: Pollution. An examination of government’s response to pollution. Common-law nuisance; administrative mechanisms at local, state, and
512. Seminar: Future of the Insurance Principle. An exploration of insurance plans and comparable arrangements as means for dealing with a variety of social and economic problems. Attention will be directed to the actual or possible use of insurance and risk sharing arrangements, either on a voluntary or compulsory basis, under differing circumstances; and analysis will be focused on the range of problems these uses have already posed or are likely to pose for the legal system. (4). Mr. Blum, Mr. Kimball. [Not offered in 1976-77.]

513. Seminar: Basic Doctrines in the Law of Instruments and Paper Rights. The seminar will examine general theories underlying the law of instruments and other paper rights. The subject matter will be explored in conjunction with the Uniform Commercial Code, pre-Code law, consumer protection statutes, general principles of law and legislative approaches in other common law jurisdictions. Particular attention will be devoted to the complex nature of a negotiable instrument as subject to various segments of law (law of property, law of contracts, the law merchant and a specific statute), negotiation and assignment, the holder and the holder in due course of a negotiable instrument, the transfer of a negotiable instrument without negotiation, non-negotiable instruments, the concept of negotiability, the development of new kinds of negotiable instruments, the consequences of the embodiment of abstract rights in paper, secured transactions in paper rights and the nature of chattel paper. Win (4). Mr. Geva.

515. Seminar: Juvenile Justice. This seminar will examine the principles and institutions of juvenile justice in the United States. Topics will include jurisdiction of juvenile courts in delinquency, child neglect and neglected children, and minors in need of supervision (e.g., truancy cases, runaways, etc.). Major emphasis will be placed on the institutions of juvenile justice: the courts, intake facilities, probation, detention, clinical services, community service agencies and correctional institutions. Enrollment will be limited to fifteen students from the Law School and fifteen students from the School of Social Service Administration. Aut (4). Mr. Zinzing, Mrs. Rosenheim.

516. Seminar: Law and Psychiatry. The seminar will run through the Winter and Spring Quarters, meeting from 4:00 p.m. to 6:00 p.m. on Wednesday afternoons. The Winter Quarter will be devoted to a study of basic psychiatric disorders, their etiology and treatment. In addition to class discussion, students will attend case demonstrations and observe interviewing methods. Students will be required to live and work in a state mental hospital for two days and nights, from a Thursday afternoon through Saturday afternoon. In the Spring Quarter the focus of attention will shift to selected legal-psychiatric problems in the criminal law and in the hospitalization of the insane and retarded. Visits to courts responsible for committing the mentally ill will be arranged. Comparisons between prison and hospital will be drawn, and the conflict between individual freedom and social responsibility will be delineated. A paper will be required. Class materials will include the casebook by Alexander D. Brooks, Law, Psychiatry and the Mental Health System, the legislative drafts of the Governor’s Commission for Revision of the Mental Health Code of Illinois, and other material. Win (2), Spr (2). Mr. Morris, Dr. Rubin.

520. Seminar: Trial Practice (a). An introduction to the techniques of advocacy in civil and criminal trials. In civil cases, pleading and discovery and their relationship to trial will be addressed. In criminal cases, the seminar will consider pre-trial proceedings such as commissioner’s hearings, preliminary hearings, arraignments, and motions, and post-trial proceedings such as motions for a new trial and sentencing hearings. Experienced trial lawyers will participate by instruction and demonstration. Members of the seminar will be responsible for either the preparation and trial of simulated civil cases or, insofar as permitted by court rules, actual criminal cases, or both. Students in the seminar should have taken Evidence; those with special interest in criminal trials should have taken or be currently enrolled in Criminal Procedure. Enrollment will be limited to thirty-five students. Permission of the instructor is required. Preference will be given to third-year students. The seminar will extend over two quarters. Win (2), Spr (2). Mr. Horan.

521. SEMINAR: TRIAL PRACTICE (b). A two-quarter seminar, beginning in the Spring Quarter and concluding in the following Autumn Quarter. The seminar introduces and develops techniques of trial advocacy, with special emphasis on representation of the poor. During the Spring Quarter members of the seminar make written and oral presentations for critique by the seminar and experienced trial lawyers. In civil cases, seminar topics include investigation, pleading, motions, and discovery and their relationship to trial and possible appeal. In criminal cases, seminar topics include pre-trial hearings and motions, voir dire, trial, post-trial proceedings, and the special problems incident to representation of the incarcerated defendant. During the Autumn Quarter students will prepare and present actual cases in court under the supervision of the instructor and clinic fellows. Preference in enrollment is given to second-year participants in the Mandel Legal Aid Clinic and the Woodlawn Community Defender Office who will be eligible for certification under Illinois Supreme Court Rule 711 to practice with these offices during their third year. Students in the seminar should have taken Evidence and Criminal Procedure. Students taking Trial Practice (b) are not eligible to enroll in Trial Practice (a). Aut (2), Spr (2). Mr. Palm.

522. SEMINAR: APPELLATE PROCEDURE. Appellate jurisdiction, who may appeal, cross and separate appeals, the finality rule, interlocutory appeals, review by extraordinary writs, the Federal Rules of Appellate Procedure, problems of judicial management in the handling of appeals. (4). Mr. Lucas. [Not offered in 1976-77.]

523. SEMINAR: WORKSHOP IN INDUSTRIAL ORGANIZATION. Studies in the structure and behavior of industries, with special emphasis on the role of government regulation. Law students wishing to participate in the workshop may do so by registering for 499 credit, with the permission of the Dean. Aut, Win, Spr. Mr. Becker, Mr. Stigler.

524. SEMINAR: WORKSHOP IN LAW AND ECONOMICS. This workshop is devoted to the intensive examination of selected problems in the application of economic reasoning to legal questions in such fields as property law, criminal procedure, accident law, and antitrust law. Workshop sessions will be devoted to the presentation and discussion of papers by students and by members of the faculty of the University of Chicago and of other institutions. The workshop will meet every other week throughout the academic year. Students enrolled in the workshop will receive six credits for satisfactory completion of a substantial paper. Aut (2), Win (2), Spr (2). Mr. Landes, Mr. Posner.

528. SEMINAR: ACCOUNTING AND THE LAW. This seminar will consider the legal implications of several major problem areas in accounting. Among the topics to be considered are publication of forecasts, inflation accounting reporting including replacement cost data and general price level adjustments, lease capitalization, and segment reporting. Law 428 (Accounting) or its equivalent is a prerequisite. Aut (4). Mr. Davidson, Mr. Fiflis.

529. SEMINAR: CURRENT CORPORATION PROBLEMS. An intensive consideration (more than is possible in the course in corporations) of certain specialized problems in corporations and corporate finance which are current and in flux as, for example: concepts of corporate control; problems of convertible securities; restrictions upon the sale of corporate control; use and character of stock options; special problems of mutual funds; and the allowable extent of exculpatory clauses in charters. Spr (4). Mr. Kaplan.

CURRICULUM 29

530. Seminar: Defamation and Privacy. This seminar will examine the common law and constitutional bases of the law of defamation and privacy, using both original case materials and secondary sources. In addition to dealing with the doctrinal complexities of these areas, efforts will be made to tie in the applicable substantive principles to the general body of tort law on the one hand and the vast array of constitutional theories upon the other. Spr (4). Mr. Epstein.

534. Seminar: Max Weber and the Sociology of Law. Max Weber introduces his collected writings on the sociology of religion with the following remarks: "A product of European civilization, studying any problem of universal history, is bound to ask himself to what combination of circumstances the fact should be attributed that in Western civilization, and in Western civilization only, cultural phenomena have appeared which (as we like to think) lie in a line of development having universal significance and validity." According to Weber, both the uniqueness and the universality of modern European civilization are attributable to the rationalism of its political and economic institutions. In this seminar we shall explore Weber's account of the role which legal ideas and techniques have played in the development of our modern life. Special attention will be paid to his discussion of law as an instrument of rationalization. The principal text for the seminar will be Weber's Sociology of Law. Supplemental readings will be drawn from Weber's other writings, and from the works of Marx, Durkheim, Maine, Troeltsch, Gierke and Joseph Needham. A paper will be required. Win (4). Mr. Kronman.

535. Seminar: Desegregation of Public Schools. Legal and sociological perspectives on contemporary problems arising out of the racial segregation of public schools. The seminar will examine the impact of segregation and desegregation on the educational process and, equally, upon community life and values. The legal focus will be on the legal rights and obligations of students and school administrators, and, especially, upon the permissible remedies for violations of constitutional rights. Students will be expected to investigate both legal and sociological materials in order to write research papers spanning the intersection between law and social behavior. Win (4). Mr. Coleman, Mr. Kurland.

537. Seminar: Great Frauds. This seminar will consider in detail certain recent major frauds, such as the Billy Sol Estes case, the Salad Oil Scandal, and several other financial scandals. The purpose will be to trace the operation of these schemes, to examine the similarities among them, and to consider the effects of the law on the actions of the defrauder and possibilities of improvement of the relevant laws. Materials to be considered will include court cases, Congressional hearings, and popular literature dealing with these scandals. Win (4). Mr. Blum, Mr. Kaplan.

538. Seminar: State and Local Finance. The seminar will explore selected contemporary problems in the area of state and local finance. The focus will be on issues that are of particular professional interest to lawyers. Topics will include financial disclosure requirements in connection with state and local borrowing; federal regulation of state and local borrowing; and recent developments in the area of educational finance. Spr (4). Mr. Hellerstein.
539. SEMINAR: LABOR-MANAGEMENT RELATIONS. This seminar will deal with selected current labor-management problems. In the Winter Quarter, students interested in enrolling will be encouraged to propose topics for this seminar. Thereafter, proposed topics for student papers and presentations will be announced, and assignments will be made. The basic course in Labor Law or the consent of the instructor is a prerequisite for enrollment. Spr (4). Mr. Meltzer.

540. SEMINAR: ANTITRUST LAW. The seminar will explore selected problems in antitrust litigation, with emphasis on private actions for treble damages. Students must have taken one of the courses in Antitrust Law. Enrollment is limited to ten students. (4). Mr. Neal [Not offered in 1976-77.]

548. SEMINAR: SELECTED TOPICS IN CIVIL LIBERTIES: SOVEREIGN IMMUNITY. The most important modern application of sovereign and related immunities (official immunity, judicial immunity) is to federal claims against state and local governments and officials. This seminar will review the historical development of immunity doctrines and the modern exceptions and ways of circumventing them. Emphasis will be placed on the interaction among the common law immunity doctrines, the Eleventh Amendment, the Fourteenth Amendment, and the post-Civil War civil rights acts. Despite the civil liberties emphasis, students wishing to write papers on other applications of sovereign immunity will be encouraged to do so. The seminar will meet the first half of the Winter Quarter and the second half of Spring Quarter; the Spring Quarter meetings will be devoted to presentation of student papers. Students may enroll for up to four credit hours, in either quarter, or divided between the two quarters. Spr (4). Mr. Laycock.

549. SEMINAR: CONSTITUTIONAL LAW. The seminar will explore selected recent decisions of the United States Supreme Court which bear on the role of judicial review. Each seminar session will be devoted to one case (plus supplemental materials). Cases have been chosen which deserve more attention than can normally be paid to them in the context of course analysis. Constitutional Law I and Constitutional Law II or III are a prerequisite. The list of cases includes: Reitman v. Mu'key, Jones v. Mayer, DeFrisi v. Odegaard, Griswold v. Connecticut, Roe v. Wade, Furman v. Georgia, N.Y. Times v. U.S., U.S. v. Nixon. (4). Mr. Casper. [Not offered in 1976-77.]

550. SEMINAR: CONSTITUTIONAL LAW: THE NECESSARY AND PROPER CLAUSE. This seminar will be devoted to a study of the "necessary and proper clause" of Article I, including its origins, its uses, and its potential for allocating power not only between nation and states but within the government itself. Each student will be expected to prepare a paper for presentation to the seminar. Admission by permission of the instructor. (4). Mr. Kurland. [Not offered in 1976-77.]

551. SEMINAR: EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS. Students enrolled in this seminar are divided into "courts," each of which consists of five "Justices." During each of the first five weeks of the quarter, the courts are assigned several hypothetical cases raising issues under the Equal Protection Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment. The cases must be decided with opinion (concurring and dissenting opinions are permitted). The decisions may be premised on the legislative history of the Clause, and on any doctrines or precedents created by the "Justices" themselves. The "Justices" may not rely, however, upon any actual decisions of the United States Supreme Court. The seminar is designed to give students some insight into the problems a Justice confronts in collaborating with colleagues, interpreting an ambiguous constitutional provision, and then living with the doctrines and precedents he or she creates. Spr (4). Mr. Stone.

552. SEMINAR: THE SUPREME COURT. An analysis of cases on the docket of the Supreme Court in the current term. The members of the seminar prepare draft opinions after studying the briefs filed in the Supreme Court. The Opinions are circulated and then discussed in the seminar, usually in advance of the actual decision of the particular case by the Court. The required written work consists of the several opinions which each student must prepare. Enrollment is by permission of the instructor and is limited to approximately nine students. Win (4). Mr. Kitch.

553. Seminar: Workshop in Constitutional Law. The seminar will examine seminal constitutional cases to consider their origins, strategies, arguments, political bases, and effects. The subject matter is really the Supreme Court as a "continuing constitutional convention" with an attempt to evaluate its legitimacy and its constituencies. Each student will be expected to prepare a paper for presentation to the seminar. Admission by permission of the instructor. Spr (4). Mr. Kurland.

554. Seminar: The Legislative Process. The seminar will be concerned with the current work of the Congress. Each student will be required to prepare a paper on one major piece of legislation. The paper will take the form of a report setting out the problem addressed by the legislation, the issues suggested, the political forces on each side, the prognosis for passage, the legal and conditional questions involved, and a conclusion recommending approval or disapproval in whole or in part. Students admitted with the permission of the instructor only. Aut (4). Mr. Kurland.

555. Seminar: Separation of Powers. The seminar will examine the issues involved in the separation of powers among the executive, legislative, and judicial branches of the federal government. Emphasis will be placed not merely on cases decided by the judiciary but also on established practices in such areas as the budget, monetary policy, tax policy, economic regulation, and government reorganization. Procedural rules within the executive and the legislative branches will be examined to determine their bearing on the outcome of issues involving other branches. Aut (4). Mr. Dam.

556. Seminar: Comparative Law: Fact-Finding in Civil Litigation. The seminar will examine the methods by which questions of fact are defined, resolved and translated into judgment in civil litigation in France and other European countries. The respective roles of parties, counsel and judge(s) in delimiting and resolving contested issues of fact, the means by which evidence may be discovered and introduced, the use of experts and the ultimate determination of fact issues in first instance and on appeal will be studied and compared with the processes of discovery and fact-finding in American civil litigation. Prerequisite: a reading knowledge of French or another modern European language or consent of the instructor. Win (4). Mr. Beardsley.

557. Seminar: French Administrative Law. An examination of the classical Continental system of administrative law, intended to provide a comparative basis for common lawyers. We will begin with the historical origins of the Conseil d'Etat. We will examine the organization, staffing, procedure, and jurisdiction of the Conseil and of the lesser administrative courts. We will conclude with a study of certain of the fields of substantive law which the administrative courts have produced, especially the law of public contracts. The course in Administrative Law is an essential prerequisite for this seminar; it will in no case be waived. All assigned materials for the seminar will be in English although optional reading in French will be suggested; knowledge of the French language will be required only of students who wish to substitute a research paper for what will otherwise be a 48-hour take-home examination. (4). Mr. Langbein. [Not offered in 1976-77.]

558. Seminar: French Business Taxation. The seminar will examine selected aspects of the taxation of business enterprises in France from a comparative point of view. Fiscal incentives for the expansion, concentration and regional decentralization of enterprises, the use of tax devices to encourage public investment in corporate securities, and the application and incidence of the value-added tax are among the topics to be taken up. A knowledge of French is not required, but students with an adequate command of that language may substitute a paper for the examination. (4). Mr. Beardsley. [Not offered in 1976-77.]

559. Seminar: Roman Law. An examination of selected topics in the Roman law of contracts, torts (delict), property, and procedure. Topics will be selected in order to shed light on the relationship between common-law and Roman law treatment of certain problems of current interest. The seminar is not designed to provide a comprehensive knowledge of all the detailed workings of Roman law. No knowledge of Latin will be required for the seminar. (4). Mr. Epstein. [Not offered in 1976-77.]

560. Seminar: Jurisprudence. A detailed analysis of selected problems in jurisprudence studied in connection with the classic original writings in the area. Among the problems to be considered are: the definition of law, the relationship between law and morality, the enforcement of morals, the analysis of "legal" concepts, and the place of precedent in legal thought. Students will be required to write a paper on a problem of their own choosing. (4). Mr. Epstein. [Not offered in 1976-77.]

561. Seminar: The Legal Imagination. A study of the ways in which lawyers think and speak. We explore the limits and resources of traditional forms of legal thought and expression both directly and by extensive comparison with passages drawn from other fields, including poetry, fiction, drama, and history. The premise of the study is that the law can be regarded as an imaginative and literary activity that yields the sorts of pleasures and significance, and makes the sorts of demands, that other important writing does. To discover the possibilities available to him or to her both as a lawyer and as an independent mind, the student will be asked to prepare a series of detailed legal and non-legal writing assignments. The subject of the seminar is the art by which these possibilities can be enhanced or expanded. Specific topics with respect to which these interests are pursued include: the rhetoric of the death penalty; the intellectual implications of the statutory form; the ways in which the law talks about human character; the use of racial language in the law; the implications of the use of the rule as an instrument for the organization of social relations and as a device for arriving at and explicating judgments; and rather extended comparisons between the sorts of writing the lawyer does and the writing of poets and historians. Weekly papers are assigned. Enrollment will be limited to fifteen students. Readings: White, The Legal Imagination; Shakespeare, Troilus and Cressida; Euripides, Alcestis; and Jane Austen, Pride and Prejudice. Win (4). Mr. White.

562. Seminar: Slavery and the Law. This is the fourth phase of a sequence devoted to the study of slavery. In the first year we studied the use of law to create and maintain the institution of slavery. In the second year we examined the role of law in attempting to terminate slavery through prohibitions on the slave trade, manumission, and emancipation. Last year we studied abolitionism. The current seminar will focus on the interstate problems created by the institution of slavery: the status of slaves who crossed voluntarily or escaped into free jurisdictions; complications created by the interstate slave trade and other forms of interstate commerce; the impact of regionalism on the question of slavery in the territories. In general, we will consider the significance of federalism in the history of slavery in the United States. A series of short papers (or, alternatively, a long research paper) will be required of each student. In addition, there will be weekly reading assignments in prepared course materials. The aim of the seminar is both historical and jurisprudential, to get a better understanding of slavery and the nature of American law. (4). Mr. Katz. [Not offered in 1976-77.]
564. Seminar: American Legal History: Philanthropy, Public Policy, and Social Reform, 1865–1969. The seminar will concern itself with the transformation from the private to the public sector in the management of American social reform. We are interested in the process by which private reform and philanthropic organizations became public institutions or had their functions amalgamated into government. Seminar meetings will be devoted to intensive discussion of prepared materials on a series of topics designed to illustrate the private-public tension in reform management: the emergence of the modern foundation; conservation of natural resources; public health; social welfare; Indian Americanization; Black integration; the consumer movement; federal involvement in education. The assigned materials will be drawn from both legal and historical sources. This seminar is open to law students and graduate students in the social sciences. Graduate students may enroll for a second quarter in the spring. A research paper will be required of all students. (4). Mr. Katz. [Not offered in 1976–77.]

565. Seminar: English Legal History. The seminar provides an opportunity for intensive research and writing in the legal history of the early modern period. Enrollment is very small, research is supervised, and papers normally go through several drafts. The object is to produce work of publishable quality, primarily on topics connected with the history of criminal and civil procedure in the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries. Among the questions suitable for investigation: changes in the jury system, such as the decline of the grand jury; juror selection; the feigned issue; the development and scope of various rules of evidence, such as the disqualification of parties for interest; the origins of compulsory process for witnesses; the Statute of Frauds of 1677; the development of the right to defense counsel and other safeguards in the criminal process; the growth of appellate review for insufficiency of the evidence; the expansion of the lawyer's role from pleading to trial advocacy. Prerequisite: Law 463, Development of Legal Institutions, or the permission of the instructor. Aut (4). Mr. Langbein.

566. Seminar: European Legal History. A reading seminar designed to provide students of Anglo-American legal history with a basis for comparative study. Part I: The sources of European law in the Middle Ages—canon law, vulgar Roman law, Germanic law, feudal law, urban law. Part II: The revival of Roman law in Italy and the differentiation of the national legal systems in the North. Part III: The “reception of Roman law” in the Renaissance. Part IV: The assimilation of Roman law and the origins of the codification movement. (Prerequisites: Law 463, Development of Legal Institutions, and Law 559, Seminar: Roman Law. Students with adequate command of German, French, Italian, or Dutch may substitute a paper for the examination.) (4). Mr. Langbein. [Not offered in 1976–77.]

567. Seminar: International Law. An examination of the future of the International Legal Order based upon major academic projects under way at Princeton University, the Council on Foreign Relations, the Institute for World Order, and at the Tri-Lateral Commission. Topics to be studied include existing trends and patterns of international society, the character of recurring options about the future, the design of international institutions and arrangements, principal types of world order systems, relevant utopias, transition to preferred futures, international justice and the problem of values in world order. (4). Mr. Gottlieb. [Not offered in 1976–77.]

568. Seminar: The Role of Congress in the Making of Foreign Policy. The seminar will explore the foreign and defense policy role of the Congress in terms of the framers' intentions, historical developments, and international relations. The seminar will single out the topic of so-called executive agreements and analyze the problems Congress encounters in attempting to oversee these agreements from the vantage points of constitutional law, international law, and domestic and international politics. Spr (4). Mr. Casper, Mr. Gottlieb.

569. Seminar: Criminal Justice. A consideration of several fundamental problems in criminal justice from a comparative viewpoint. The stated and achieved purposes of punishment will be considered as will questions of mental intent in crime and responsibility for crime. No detailed knowledge of German and other European criminal justice systems will be expected, but they will be used for comparative analysis. Win (4). Mr. Weigend.

STUDENT ORGANIZATIONS AND ACTIVITIES

The University of Chicago Law Review, founded in 1933 and published by the School, is written and managed by students. Students who submit promising work in an annual writing competition, as well as students who rank highest in scholarship upon completion of their first year, are invited to become members of the Review staff. In recent years, about 20 percent of the students in each first-year class have been invited to participate on the Review. From these groups, the managing board and associate editors are chosen. Students who are not invited at the end of the first year but who later write comments that are accepted for publication in the Review may be asked to join the staff.

The Hinton Moot Court Competition, founded in 1954, and named for Judge Edward W. Hinton (Professor of Law, 1913–36), is open to all second- and third-year students. Each year participants refine the skills gained in the first-year tutorial program in the arts of brief writing and oral argument before mock appellate tribunals. Competitors argue individually before panels of faculty and Chicago attorneys in the fall and winter rounds; the climax of the best final arguments comes in the spring with the Karl Llewellyn Cup Argument between the two best second-year teams of two, and the Hinton Argument between the top two teams, traditionally presided over by a Justice of the United States Supreme Court. Actual cases, often pending decision, are used, and the program is conducted by third-year students who comprise the Hinton Moot Court Committee.

The Mandel Legal Aid Association is the student organization associated with the work of the Mandel Legal Aid Clinic and the Woodlawn Community Defender Office. The Mandel Clinic, housed in the Law School, operates as an office of the Legal Aid Bureau of Chicago. It is directed by Gary H. Palm, Associate Professor in the Law School. The Woodlawn Community Defender Office is sponsored jointly by the Law School and the Criminal Defense Consortium of Cook County. The staff attorneys in both offices are Clinical Fellows in the Law School. The clinical program is described more fully elsewhere in these Announcements.

The Law Student Association is the student government organization. Its president and five representatives from each class are elected annually by the student body. The Association organizes social and other extracurricular activities during the academic year.
and, through its officers and committees, serves as a means of communicating student opinion on academic and other matters. The Association sponsors the weekly Wine Mess for students and faculty, a traditional feature of social life in the School, and arranges for faculty-student lunches, speaker programs, and athletic events. Other student activities at the Law School include the Environmental Law Society, a group of students who organize seminars, conduct research, and disseminate reference materials in the field of environmental law; BALSA, a local chapter of a national organization concerned with the interests of black students in law schools; the Law Women's Caucus, a group concerned with the role of women in the legal profession; the Douglas Inn of Phi Delta Phi, a national legal fraternity, which organizes a program of professional and social activities for its student membership; and a local chapter of the National Lawyers Guild.

The Easter Bunny comes to Professor Stanley A. Kaplan's class on Reorganization, Recapitalization, and Insolvency.
RESEARCH AND SPECIAL PROGRAMS

The Law School publishes four professional journals, The University of Chicago Law Review, The Supreme Court Review, The Journal of Law and Economics, and The Journal of Legal Studies. The Law Review is a quarterly published under the management of a board of student editors. The Supreme Court Review is an annual volume devoted to responsible professional criticism of the current decisions of the Supreme Court. The Journal of Law and Economics provides a forum for the publication of writings by economists and lawyers on problems that are both economic and legal and seeks to stimulate scholarly investigation of such problems. The Journal of Legal Studies provides a forum for basic theoretical and empirical research into the operation of legal systems and institutions.

The School’s long-standing concern with the relationships between law and economics is reflected in the Law and Economics Program, under which lawyers and economists interested in problems in this area have been encouraged to spend some time at the Law School working on problems of their choice. The aim of the Law and Economics Program is to advance understanding of the effects of laws, and hence to enlighten both economic theory and proposals for law reform, by systematic investigation of aspects of the legal system in a framework of economic analysis. A continuing series of studies has focused on problems in the antitrust field. Recently attention has been given to problems of public ownership and public regulation of economic enterprise, to problems of labor organization and technological advance, and to the problems of allocation of rights in underseas resources. Recent studies have examined decisions in the field of accident law, land-use patterns occurring in the absence of intensive control through zoning laws, the United States postal system, the oil-import quota system, the regulation of the taxicab industry in Chicago, and the allocation of enforcement resources by the Antitrust Division of the Department of Justice. Professor Ronald H. Coase is Director of the Program.

The Center for Studies in Criminal Justice, established in 1965 under a grant from the Ford Foundation, is concerned with enlarging knowledge of behavior defined as criminal; with studying the operation and assisting in the development of the agencies of criminal justice and other agencies of social control; and with providing graduate training in the methodology and practice of research in these areas. The Center maintains close working relationships with other disciplines in the behavioral sciences relevant to the prevention and treatment of crime, and with the operating agencies of criminal justice at the local, state, and federal levels. Current research projects include an evaluation of an experiment in probation utilizing non-professionals and ex-offenders as probation officer assistants; an analysis of the operation of deterrent processes in the criminal law; the current status of American jails and prospects for alternative measures; the evaluation of drug-abuse programs and public policy related to narcotics; the relationship of weapons to homicide rates and gun-control measures; the formulation and implementation of the proposed new Illinois code of corrections; and alternative ways of dealing with the competency to plead question. Other planned projects will deal with the impact of the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968 on the agencies of criminal justice, with several aspects of the administration of justice in juvenile and family courts, and with the testing of citizen-alarm devices in the reduction of crime and the fear of crime. Professor Franklin Zimring is Director of the Center.

The School is presently embarked on the development of a Program in Legal History which seeks to stimulate research in this emerging field, especially with reference to American legal history, and to help train prospective law teachers and historians for work in the field. Significant research projects presently under way concern the history of criminal procedure, the role of private foundations in social reform legislation, and the legal framework surrounding the institution of slavery. Besides regular curricular offerings, the program sponsors special lectures and conferences each year and a Workshop in Legal History that meets at intervals throughout the academic year. The faculty of the Law School includes two historians, and members of the History Department of the University participate in the teaching program of the Law School.

The program in Law and the Behavioral Sciences has for some years been supporting studies aimed at increasing knowledge about legal institutions by drawing upon relevant knowledge and techniques of other disciplines concerned with social organization. Continuing projects under this program are an empirical study of the behavior of juries in civil and in criminal cases, which seeks among other things to isolate the characteristics of jury determination which differentiate it from decisions by judges without juries; a study of the role of lay judges in the Austrian courts; studies of the causes of court congestion and certain proposed remedial devices; and a study of existing systems of lawmaking by arbitration.

The Comparative Law Research Center, established in 1949, serves as a means of encouraging and guiding research projects in the field of international legal relations and comparative private law. It also serves as a clearinghouse of information for foreign research and teaching institutions and provides advice to scholars and students abroad who are engaged in studies touching upon American law.

The Law School maintains close working relations with the American Bar Foundation, the research affiliate of the American Bar Association. The Foundation, located across the street from the Law School in the American Bar Center, carries on a broad program of research in law and its processes, notably in criminal law, legal problems of the poor, and judicial administration. The program of the Foundation provides opportunities for students in the Law School to work as research assistants while in school and during the intervening summers. The Executive Director of the Foundation is Professor Spencer L. Kimball. Members of the Law School faculty act as consultants in the Foundation's work.
A Placement Office, under the supervision of the Director of Placement, is maintained by the Law School. Its primary function is to keep students aware of career opportunities as they become available and to help students take advantage of these opportunities. To do so, the Placement Office maintains an extensive library of material concerning potential legal employers in all areas of interest and students are urged to familiarize themselves with these materials early in their law school experience. In addition to employment information, this library contains material on bar admissions, judicial clerkships, general career opportunities (including teaching positions), and self-help information.

As part of its operations, the Placement Office maintains contact with employers throughout the year and there is a regular flow of inquiries concerning student job opportunities. In addition, employers are invited to come to the Law School in the fall of the year to interview second-year students for summer positions and third-year students for permanent employment. Facilities and scheduling are furnished by the Law School, and over 300 employers will be interviewing at the School this fall. They come from all over the United States—as far away as Hawaii—and afford students a wide range of location and employment from which to choose. Some 85 percent of all interviewing employers represent law firms of all sizes, but other fields of interest, including corporate law departments, government agencies, and academic institutions, are represented.

For those employers who, for one reason or another, do not come to the Law School to interview, the Placement Office offers a Credential Assembly Service whereby résumés of interested students are collected and forwarded to the employer. A large number of employers use this service during the year.

Although most of the concentration of effort of the Placement Office is directed to second- and third-year students, job opportunities do become available to first-year students and a substantial number obtain law-related summer positions at the end of their first year.

During the school year several general conferences are sponsored by the Placement Office covering career opportunities and job-finding techniques. Also, the Director of Placement is available for individual career counseling and students are urged to consult with him on particular career and job-finding problems. Faculty members are also available to students for career guidance.

Services are also offered by the Placement Office to alumni who, for various reasons, may be seeking to change positions. Information concerning job opportunities is regularly made available to inter­ested alumni through a bulletin service.

The Placement Office is located on the ground floor of the Law School building, just below the entrance to the Weymouth Kirkland Courtroom, and is open all year.

INFORMATION FOR APPLICANTS

ADMISSIONS

PREPARATION FOR LAW STUDY

The Law School does not require that applicants for admission present college credits in any specified subjects. An excellent general education is thought more important for the study of law than specialized study in fields closely related to the law. Ideally such an education should include some study of history and of the social sciences, while not neglecting literature, philosophy, or other humane fields. It should serve to develop the capacity for logical precision; demonstrated competence in mathematics or the physical sciences is to be valued for this among other reasons. Increasingly a mastery of some foreign language is useful in the study of law as the ability to learn about other legal systems becomes more important to our society. But, just as there are many different roads to the acquisition of an inquiring, disciplined, cultivated mind, so there are different ways in which a student may acquire a valuable foundation for the study of law. Perhaps of greatest importance is that the student should have acquired habits of precision, fluency, and economy in speaking and writing.

Prospective applicants may obtain additional information on law school preparation and related matters by consulting the current edition of the Prelaw Handbook, published annually in October and prepared by the Law School Admission Test Council and the Association of American Law Schools. This book includes material on the law and lawyers, prelaw preparation, applying to law schools, and the study of law, together with particular information on most American law schools. It may be obtained at college bookstores or ordered from Educational Testing Service, Box 944, Princeton, New Jersey 08540.

APPLICATION PROCEDURE

A request for application forms should be addressed to the Dean of Students, The Law School, The University of Chicago, 1111 East 60th Street, Chicago, Illinois 60637. The completed application form must be returned to the same office along with an application fee of $15, in the form of a check or money order payable to The University of Chicago. The application fee is not refundable. Since applications are considered as soon as they are completed, candidates are advised to have all their material submitted by January 1.
Applications received after March 1 are considered only in exceptional circumstances.

Applicants must arrange to take the Law School Admission Test and have an official report of their scores on the test sent to the Law School. Application forms for the test and information about it may be obtained by requesting the Law School Admission Test Bulletin from LSAT, Educational Testing Service, Box 944, Princeton, New Jersey 08540. The test is scheduled to be given at selected locations in the United States and abroad on October 9, 1976; December 4, 1976; February 5, 1977; April 16, 1977; and July 23, 1977. It is recommended that applicants take the test no later than December to insure timely reporting of scores to the Law School. Applications to take the test in the United States must be received by the Educational Testing Service at least three weeks before the scheduled date of the test. Applications to take the test at foreign centers must be received at least one month before the scheduled date. Requests for the establishment of special centers in the United States or Canada or for special examination dates must be received by the Educational Testing Service at least five weeks before the scheduled test date, and for special foreign centers at least eight weeks before the scheduled test date.

Applicants should also register with the Law School Data Assembly Service (LSDAS) by completing and mailing the registration form supplied with each Law School Admission Test Bulletin. A transcript from each college or university attended should then be sent not to the Law School but directly to: LSDAS, Educational Testing Service, Box 944, Princeton, New Jersey 08540. LSDAS will analyze the transcripts and send copies to this law school and to others designated by the applicant on the registration form. If accepted, the applicant will be asked to submit a final transcript, showing the award of a Bachelor's degree, directly to the Law School. Before that time, additional transcripts should be submitted only in response to a special request from the Law School.

Applicants requesting financial assistance during their first year should submit a financial aid application along with the application for admission. The financial aid application must be supplemented by financial data questionnaires processed by the Graduate and Professional School Financial Aid Service (GAPSFAS). The GAPSFAS application may be obtained from the financial aid officers at most undergraduate institutions or from GAPSFAS, Box 2614, Princeton, New Jersey 08540. Applicants should complete their own questionnaires and arrange to have parents and spouses or spouses-to-be complete the appropriate questionnaires. The questionnaires should then be sent to GAPSFAS, where they will be analyzed, duplicated, and sent to each law school designated on the registration form.
At the time of application to the Law School, applicants are asked to give the names of at least three persons who will furnish letters of recommendation about them. Each applicant is responsible for seeing that these letters are mailed directly to the Law School. The letters of recommendation must normally be received before an application is considered complete.

In recent years the development of central clearinghouse services such as LSDAS and GAPSFAS has made it easier for applicants to complete the variety of application requirements necessitated by multiple applications. On individual occasions, however, these systems may break down or people may forget to complete letters of recommendation without applicants being aware of such delays. Consequently, the Law School utilizes a sequence of self-addressed notice cards to advise applicants of the completeness of their applications before they are submitted to the Admissions Committee.

The large number of Law School applications makes it necessary to forgo personal interviews as a required part of the admission process. Prospective students are encouraged, however, to visit the Law School, if convenient, to see the facilities, talk with students, and familiarize themselves with the School. Applicants having questions about the application procedure and the admissions process or applicants wishing to present documentation in support of their applications should feel free to correspond directly with the Dean of Students. Interviews can be arranged in those special instances when an applicant feels that his or her case cannot adequately be described in writing. After the Committee begins acting on applications, a number of candidates will be invited to have interviews, generally in February and March, with representatives of the Committee either at the Law School or at other locations around the country.

ADMISSIONS PROCESS

Admission to the Law School is based upon a careful review of each application by a faculty Admissions Committee. The Committee considers all evidence that may indicate academic and professional promise. No automatic quantitative criteria are applied, although academic achievement as reflected in the college record and the evidence of intellectual ability provided by the Law School Admission Test are necessarily major determinants. The candidate group accepted for the 1976 entering class had a median LSAT score of 723 and a median cumulative undergraduate grade-point average of 3.73 on a 4.00-point system. One-fourth of those accepted had LSAT scores above 750, and one-fourth had scores below 702, although fewer than 5 per cent scored below 652. One-fourth of those accepted had grade-point averages above 3.87, and one-fourth...

Discerning letters of recommendation and personal statements, submitted written material, special distinction in undergraduate work, and outstanding achievements are often crucial factors in the admission decision. Letters of recommendation of particular value are those from former instructors who have special knowledge of the candidate's abilities.

Once an application is complete it is given to the Admissions Office for the first consideration. This process begins in late December. The Committee uses a rolling admissions procedure, and applicants will be notified of decisions at various times in the year. The Committee is reluctant to make final decisions on a number of well-qualified candidates without the benefit of an overview of all applications. As a result, some applicants will not be admitted or denied during their first review. These applicants will be notified that final decisions have been deferred until later in the year. In late spring the Committee will complete its review of all deferred applications, and, after some candidates have been admitted, a waiting list will be created to fill any openings that may result during the summer.

Race, creed, color, sex, or national origin of the applicant plays no role in admission to the Law School.

ADMISSION WITH ADVANCED STANDING

A student in good standing at an approved American law school who has completed at least one year of law study may apply for admission to the Law School with advanced standing. The amount of transfer credit which may be recognized will be determined on the facts of each case. Ordinarily students admitted with advanced standing will be required to complete at least six quarters (two academic years) of residence at the Law School to qualify for the J.D. degree. In reviewing these applications the Admissions Committee looks at the same criteria that it considers for entering first-year students. If an applicant has applied in the past, then his or her earlier application material will be on file, and it will not be necessary to resubmit this information or tender another application fee. If the applicant is applying here for the first time, then all of the supporting material must be submitted. In either case, the most important documents will be the record of first-year law performance and any letters of recommendation from law school professors. Applications may be made at any time during the year, but they will not be considered complete until the transcript of the first-year legal work has been received. Applications submitted after the first of July are normally not considered. In recent years, between eight and ten new students have enrolled with advanced standing annually. Students who enroll with advanced standing are invited to participate in all the activities of the Law School, including Law Review, Moot Court, and the legal aid clinics. Transfer students are also eligible for selection to the Order of the Coif and may graduate with honors based upon their two years of work at the Law School.

A graduate of a foreign law school whose studies have been primarily in the common law may become a candidate for the J.D. degree. The amount of transfer credit which may be recognized will be determined on the facts of each case. Ordinarily a candidate must complete a minimum of six quarters of residence in the Law School and a minimum of 90 course hours in a program approved by the Admissions Committee to qualify for the degree. The Law School Admission Test will be required of all candidates who apply for this program.

Inquiries and requests for application forms concerning admission with advanced standing should be addressed to the Dean of Students.

FINANCIAL INFORMATION

FEES

Application fee. An application fee of $15 must accompany each original application for admission to the Law School. No part of the fee is refundable, nor is it applicable as an advance payment of other fees.

Deposit on admission. Each applicant who is accepted for admission into the Law School is required to make a deposit of $100 to secure a place in the entering class. Candidates who have applied for scholarship assistance before notification of acceptance will not be required to pay deposits prior to notification of action upon their scholarship applications.

The acceptance deposit will be applied to the tuition fee and will not be refunded, unless illness or other sufficient cause prevents an applicant from entering the Law School in the year for which he or she has been accepted.

Tuition. Tuition in the Law School for 1976-77 is $1,350 per quarter, or $4,050 for the nine-month academic year.* A student who is required to withdraw for disciplinary reasons shall not be entitled to any reduction of tuition or fees.

Health insurance fee. University policy requires that each student be covered by adequate health and hospitalization insurance. Students must pay a quarterly premium of $31.50 for this supplemental insurance or supply evidence of comparable protection from an individual or family health policy.

Special fees. The University charges $25 for late registration, $5 for late payment of tuition, and $2 for each change in registration.

EXPENSES

During the 1976–77 academic year each student can expect to pay about $4,300 for tuition, fees, books, and supplies. Expenses for room, board, laundry and cleaning, clothing, recreation, travel, and incidentals will vary depending upon individual taste and circumstances. A single student may expect to pay about $7,400, including tuition, for the academic year. Married couples should anticipate expenses of about $8,800, with an additional $1,000 for each dependent.

FINANCIAL AID FOR J.D. CANDIDATES

Approximately 60 percent of the students at the Law School receive some financial aid. Since scholarship funds are insufficient to cover all needs, nearly all assistance involves a combination of scholarship grants and loans. Decisions as to the amount of financial aid to entering students are based primarily on considerations of need. Academic achievement is also taken into account, particularly in determining the proportion of scholarship and loan assistance. In determining financial need, a student’s resources are apportioned over three years and, as a consequence, applicants should begin applying for financial assistance in the first year rather than waiting until their resources have been exhausted before applying. Since the decisions of many students to attend Chicago may depend, in part, on their initial scholarship award, a principal goal of the financial aid program is to maintain scholarship amounts in the second and third years at approximately the amount of the first-year award unless there has been a substantial change in a student’s financial situation.

Applicants requesting financial assistance during their first year should submit a financial aid application along with the application for admission. The financial aid application must be supplemented by financial data questionnaires processed by the Graduate and Professional School Financial Aid Service (GAPSFAS). The GAPSFAS application may be obtained from the financial aid officers at most undergraduate institutions or from GAPSFAS, Box 2614, Princeton, New Jersey 08540. Applicants should complete their own questionnaires and arrange to have parents and spouses or spouses-to-be complete the appropriate questionnaires. The questionnaires should then be sent to GAPSFAS, where they will be analyzed, duplicated, and sent to each law school designated on the registration form.
SCHOLARSHIPS

A substantial program of scholarship assistance is made possible by certain endowed funds, generous annual giving by alumni and other friends of the Law School, and the general funds of the University. A list of the funds and gifts from which scholarships are assigned is set forth elsewhere in these Announcements. Two scholarship funds of particular interest to entering students are described below.

The Floyd Russell Mechem Prize Scholarships. Each year the Law School offers these scholarships, which provide a stipend of tuition plus $1,000 per year (renewable for the second and third years) to a limited number of entering students with exceptional promise. The Awards are based entirely on academic promise, and financial need is not a consideration. In recent years Mechem recipients have generally had LSAT scores in the middle or high 700's and have had undergraduate and graduate grade point averages in excess of 3.8 on a 4.0 scale. Applicants who wish to be considered for Mechem Scholarships should so indicate on their application for admission. Only candidates whose applications have been completed by February 1 will be eligible.

The La Verne Noyes Foundation Scholarships. Although most scholarship funds are unrestricted and thus available to all qualified applicants, some funds are restricted by the donors. One such fund is the La Verne Noyes Foundation, which provides scholarship assistance where need exists to direct blood descendants of veterans who served in the Armed Forces of the United States during World War I. Service requirements for establishing eligibility to receive Noyes funds call for not less than five months of active duty, and where the active duty began after May 11, 1918, it must have been overseas service beginning before November 11, 1918. There is a space on the financial aid application for applicants to indicate probable Noyes qualification. Accepted applicants will be asked to complete a Noyes Foundation application and supply appropriate documentation.

LOANS

In addition to scholarship assistance, the University administers three separate loan programs which are described in the following sections. Loans up to $4,050 per year are available to students in the Law School upon demonstration of financial need, subject to recommendation by the Dean of Students and approval by the University Cashier. The University also offers to law students short-term emergency loans of up to $200. Such loans may be obtained within 48 hours to meet a genuine emergency and must be repaid within three months.

(1) Federally Insured Student Loan Program (FISL). Since the University of Chicago has become a lender under the FISL program, any student in the Law School will be eligible for a maximum annual loan of $2,500 at 7 per cent interest, and may accumulate a total of $10,000 in Federally Insured (and/or State Guaranteed) loans during all undergraduate and graduate years.

The federal government will pay the 7 per cent interest while the student is in school if the student demonstrates sufficient financial need according to government criteria, which include an assessment of parental resources for all students not certifiably independent of their parents by federal standards. Nine months after a student earns the J.D. degree or leaves school, he or she must begin monthly payments on the principal and on the interest which, if the student was eligible for the federal interest subsidy, begins to accrue at this time. Payment of the loan and accrued interest must be completed within ten years of the time at which payment on the principal first became due. Because the FISL program is the same as the various State Guaranteed Loan programs, no student may secure both a State Guaranteed Loan and a Federally Insured Loan within the same academic year. Law students who are United States citizens or permanent residents are eligible for Federally Insured Student Loans regardless of their state of residency. The University urges students to try to secure their initial loan through the State Guaranteed Loan program of their home state, since the University must make every effort to extend its limited student aid funds to as many students as possible. If a State Guaranteed Loan is not available to a student for any reason, however, the student should certainly apply to the University for a Federally Insured Student Loan.

(2) National Direct Student Loan Program (NDSL). NDSL funds will generally be reserved for those students who have already received the maximum $2,500 in either a State Guaranteed Loan or a Federally Insured Student Loan, and have additional need beyond the $2,500 available under these programs. The NDSL funds available to the University will be used to lend such students the difference between their FISL or State Guaranteed Loans and their tuition for an academic year of three quarters.

NDSL loans are free of interest while the student is in school. Nine months after the borrower leaves school, he or she must begin repayment on the principal and on the interest, which begins to accumulate at the rate of 3 per cent per year. The payments may be in monthly, bimonthly, or quarterly installments. NDSL funds, like Federally Insured or State Guaranteed Loans, are restricted to United States citizens or permanent residents.
(3) UNIVERSITY RESTRICTED LOAN FUNDS. Over the years a number of donors have given funds to the University to establish student loan funds. These loans are made to students who have particular circumstances which may make them ineligible for the federal loans or who have special qualifications. Applications are not necessary to receive initial consideration for these loans.

For further information on these guaranteed loan programs, contact the Loan Counselor at 5801 South Ellis Avenue (733-4595).

HOUSING

The University provides a variety of housing units for single and married graduate students. All are within walking distance of the campus or near the route of the Campus Bus, an inexpensive shuttle service run by the University. In addition, Hyde Park has a number of rental apartments ranging from one to eight rooms in size, both in walkup and elevator buildings. Some students choose to live in nearby South Shore, also served by the Campus Bus, where rents are lower. Most law students prefer to live in University housing during their first year; information about available accommodations is set out below. A more detailed guide to student housing patterns for the current student body is available from the Dean of Students upon request.

SINGLE STUDENT HOUSING

A majority of the first-year single men and women live in Linn House and Mathews House, the Law School residences, located in the Burton-Judson Courts and connected with the Law School buildings. The residences include dining hall and lounge rooms, television, recreation, and laundry facilities, as well as living quarters for law students. The rooms are furnished for either single or double occupancy. The lounges in the Burton-Judson Courts also provide a meeting place for law students and a center for extracurricular activities of the School.

Unless special arrangements are made, the assignment of rooms is for a period of three academic quarters. Room contracts include board, and the room and board rate for 1976-1977 is $2,175 for the academic year, payable in an initial deposit and three quarterly installments.

There are five other houses for single graduate students provided by the University. For the most part these buildings are coeducational and well mixed in regard to the number of departments and professional schools represented. Campus buses run frequently during the day and evening between these buildings and the Law School.

All inquiries concerning University housing for single students should be addressed to the Office of Student Housing, The University of Chicago, 5801 Ellis Avenue, Chicago, Illinois 60637 (753-3414). Students are advised to apply early in order to obtain the desired accommodations.

More than five hundred graduate men and women live in International House, an international student center on campus which houses both American and foreign students—about half and half—from the University and other colleges and universities in the Chicago area.

International House offers a varied program of cultural and social activities planned to give opportunities for the students to acquire knowledge of each other’s customs and culture. Informal discussion groups interpret the historical, political, and sociological aspects of various countries. Social events include dances, concerts, receptions, and programs presenting activities of a national character. Opportunities are provided for foreign and American students to work together in many types of student enterprise. Facilities include a large dining room with year-round cafeteria service, tennis courts, lounges and television rooms, and an assembly hall.

Quarterly rates for rooms and meals in International House are $368 for rooms with twin beds, from $401 to $449 for single rooms, and from $488 to $535 for a limited number of suites with baths. Short periods of residence (minimum three weeks) are arranged for at favorable weekly rates, which vary according to length of stay and type of room. The daily rate is $7 per person. All rooms are furnished, including blankets and bed linen.

All inquiries should be addressed to the Office of Admissions, International House, 1414 East 59th Street, Chicago, Illinois 60637 ([312] 753-2270).

MARRIED STUDENT HOUSING

The University has over one thousand apartments in thirty buildings for the housing of married students. There are furnished apartments ranging in size from one and one-half to three and one-half rooms; the unfurnished units range from two to six and one-half rooms. The rates for furnished apartments are from $182 to $208 monthly; those for unfurnished are from $141 to $274 monthly. Apartments are rented on a twelve-month basis, but special arrangements can be made to terminate the lease as of the first day of an academic quarter. Utilities other than telephone are included in the rental rate for furnished apartments but not in that for unfurnished units. The furnished apartments do not include bedding, linens, dishes, silver, or kitchen utensils. Both furnished and unfurnished apartments are provided with a stove and a refrigerator, and all apartments have a private bath.

The University will assist each married applicant to find housing, but it cannot guarantee University-owned housing to incoming married students. Applications should be made well before the time when the accommodations will be needed. Further information and application forms can be obtained by writing to the Office of Married Student Housing, The University of Chicago, 824 East 58th Street, Chicago, Illinois 60637 ([312] 753-2218).

MEAL SERVICE

Arrangements may be made by law students not living in Linn and Mathews Houses to purchase special meal cards for breakfast, lunch, or dinner, or any combination, in the Burton-Judson dining halls. Meals are also available in Woodward Commons, Pierce Commons, Billings Hospital, International House, and the Center for Continuing Education.

HOUSING STAFF POSITIONS

The University House System, consisting of twenty-one College Houses and eight Houses for graduate students, provides opportunities for law students to serve in the staff positions of Resident Head or Assistant Resident Head. Members of the staff are expected to give informal guidance and encouragement to the students as individuals and in groups in their social and cultural activities supplementary to the academic program. The Resident Head receives a furnished suite, board, weekly maid service, telephone privileges, and, in the large houses, a cash stipend. All Assistant Resident Heads receive a single room. In the first year each Assistant also receives the equivalent of one-half of a board contract; in the second year of service he or she receives a full board contract. Generally, successful applicants will be students who have been in residence for at least one year. Applications and information may be obtained from the Office of Student Housing, Room 201, Administration Building.

STUDENT HEALTH SERVICES

Medical care for University students is provided in the University Health Services located in the University Hospitals. All registered students are required to have hospitalization insurance to supplement the Student Health Program, which provides comprehensive ambulatory care. The Student Blue Cross-Blue Shield policy is recommended as the most effective and economical policy to fulfill this requirement. This provides 120 days of hospitalization in University hospitals, commencing with the first day. Students with some other form of group hospital-medical-surgical insurance which provides equivalent or greater coverage can meet the new requirement by completing an affidavit that includes the name of the insurance company and the number of the policy. Individual hospital insurance policies are not acceptable.

Registration shall not be completed until the student subscribes to the Blue Cross-Blue Shield program or files a properly completed affidavit.

HONORS AND PRIZES

The Joseph Henry Beale Prize, named in honor of the first Dean of the Law School, is awarded to the first-year student or students whose work in the first-year tutorial program is judged by the faculty to be most worthy of special recognition.

The D. Francis Bustin Educational Fund for the Law School was established in 1971 by provision of the will of D. Francis Bustin, a 1917 alumnus of the University, to give awards or prizes from time to time for a valuable and important contribution, proposal, or suggestion for the improvement and betterment of the processes, techniques, and procedures of our government or any of its branches or departments, at city, state, or federal level.

The Edwin F. Mandel Award is made annually to those members of the graduating class who, during their Law School career, have contributed the most to the Legal Aid program, in both the quality of the work done and the conscientious exercise of legal aid responsibilities.

The Robert H. Jackson Prize is awarded annually to the students who submit the best papers in connection with the work of the Seminar on Constitutional Law.

The Jerome N. Frank Prize for distinguished Law Review writing is awarded annually for the outstanding comment produced by a third-year member of The University of Chicago Law Review.

The Hinton Moot Court Competition Awards are made to the winners of the third-year moot-court competition.

The Karl Llewellyn Memorial Cup is presented each year to the highest scoring team in the second-year moot-court competition.

The Casper Platt Award is awarded each year for the outstanding paper written by a student in the Law School. The Award is supported by the

The formation of the Development Council for the Law School in 1971 was prompted by the need for the Law School to look ahead at ways of maintaining and increasing the flow of support that is vital to the future of the School. The purpose of the Development Council is to provide counsel for developing support from a broader range of sources than the traditional Fund for the Law School. In addition to assisting with the design of the Fund for the Law School, the Development Council is concerned with private foundation support, a deferred giving program, and special development projects for particular needs in the Law School program as part of Phase II of the Campaign for Chicago.

FRANKLIN E. ZIMRING
HARPER’S UNIVERSITY

When the University of Chicago was still in the blueprint stage more than eighty years ago, a prominent eastern educator wrote that placing a major institution of learning in Chicago was “the next thing to putting it in the Fiji Islands.”

It took courage to put a university in the uncultivated Middle West, but William Rainey Harper, the University’s first president, and John D. Rockefeller, its founder, wanted a university that defied tradition. They wanted a university that would be a force the day it opened, that would “revolutionize university study in this country.”

Harper instituted the four-quarter system, laid the groundwork for the junior college system, and established the first university extension program. He demanded equality of opportunity for women in the student body and on the faculty, at a time when women faculty at the university level were almost unknown. And he announced that his institution would be primarily devoted to graduate studies.

Harper died in 1906, but the University continued in the pattern he had stamped on it. Rockefeller was to say, “It's the best investment I ever made.”
AND TODAY . . .

CHICAGO stands as one of the world's foremost private universities. After revisiting it a few years ago, the late John Gunther, Class of 1922, wrote:

Perhaps the single element that best characterizes the University is its incessant search for quality, which goes back all the way to Harper. If a case need be made for the private urban university in our contemporary life, surely Chicago makes it. Between the Atlantic and Pacific it towers like a lonely colossus, symbolizing the aspirations and achievements of one of the most fruitful areas of our country, the Middle West.

Quality aside, this is a school which stands for freedom of expression, freedom to speculate and experiment, freedom for spacious inquiry, freedom to be a gadfly if necessary and freedom not only to be right but to take a chance on being wrong. . . . It still has its unique atmosphere of vitality and gives forth a sense of endurance as well as youth. My own feeling is that it is still the most exciting university in the world.
GRADUATE STUDY

since its founding, Chicago has offered distinguished graduate education. Of the approximately 8,000 students enrolled, about 2,500 are in the undergraduate College, the remainder in the four graduate Divisions (Biological Sciences, Humanities, Physical Sciences, and Social Sciences) and Professional Schools (Business, Divinity, Law, Library Science, Medicine and Social Service Administration). The American Council on Education's 1971 ratings identified Chicago's graduate programs over all as among the top three in the nation, on the basis of the number of departments in the top five. A study of advanced professional education conducted in 1973 included Chicago as one of the four leading universities providing high-quality education in a variety of professional disciplines.

Chicago's small size and the emphasis on graduate studies have encouraged unusual interaction between disciplines. While traditional departments exist at Chicago, almost all academic programs embrace specialists from different disciplines. This is also true of the Professional Schools, which are all located on the main campus and which enjoy unusually close relationships with the rest of the University. Many of the faculty hold appointments in more than one department or School, and students are encouraged to take courses, and to pursue research, in other areas. A large number of interdisciplinary committees and academic centers and institutes (described in the appropriate Announcements) facilitate such interaction.

As a producer of college and university teachers, the University is perhaps unique. A significant proportion of Chicago's Ph.D.'s—at least two-thirds—go into college teaching. The University's Pritzker School of Medicine has a higher percentage of its graduates on the faculties of medical schools than any other school of medicine. At last count, 2,500 University alumni were teaching in over fifty leading universities, and more than 140 men and women who have been associated with the University as students, faculty, or administrators are now serving as college and university presidents.

Perhaps more importantly, Chicago continues to be a university primarily dedicated to research. Former President Edward H. Levi has said:

The University's emphasis on research is paramount. It includes within research the understanding of our own and other cultures and the appreciation of the works of the mind. It includes the search for knowledge so basic as to vastly change man's powers and comprehension. And this is not just the goal but in fact the achievement. Whatever the strains, it believes that research and teaching are closely related. Research itself—the restructuring of subject matter, the revelation of insights, new and old—can be the highest form of teaching. The obligation which the University has assumed is not only to give the individual scholar the freedom and intellectual environment required for research but to undertake to transmit the qualities and understanding of research into all of its teachings.
THE QUADRANGLES

A metropolitan environment is enjoyed by most great universities, and The University of Chicago is no exception. However, students who visit the campus for the first time are often delighted to find that it is not a typical urban campus surrounded by concrete and busy streets. They find instead a pleasant island of green grass and trees located in a residential community some seven miles south of Chicago's Loop.

There are more than 125 buildings located on the 165-acre campus. The main campus, north of the tree-lined Midway Plaisance, retains the style set down by the original builders. The gray limestone buildings display the gargoyles, ivy, and spires characteristic of collegiate Gothic and are arranged in a series of tree-shaded quadrangles. The South Campus is quite different. Here the works of major twentieth-century architects include Eero Saarinen's famed Law School, Edward Durrell Stone's Center for Continuing Education, and Ludwig Mies van der Rohe's School of Social Service Administration. The works of major sculptors dot the campus, perhaps the most famous being Henry Moore's "Nuclear Energy," commemorating the spot where Chicago scientists achieved man's first self-sustaining chain reaction in 1942.

Of the buildings that have gone up since the early 1960's, the Joseph Regenstein Library, which opened in 1970, has had the greatest impact on graduate study at Chicago. It is the home of the University's Graduate Library School and houses the University's extensive collections in the social sciences and the humanities. It is perhaps an unparalleled research facility, designed to facilitate interdisciplinary as well as traditional research, to provide efficient access to the collections, and to offer attractive and comfortable study areas. The Library is one of the largest academic library buildings in the country.
THE UNIVERSITY AND THE CITY
DIVERSIONS

Shortly after The University of Chicago opened, President Harper announced that “sports will be conducted for the students, not for the spectacular entertainment of enormous crowds of people.” This spirit of extracurricular life at the University continues very much unchanged. The emphasis is still on the individual; participation, while encouraged, is entirely a matter of taste.

Despite an extensive and varied social calendar, no single activity captures the interest of the campus as a whole. Rather, if one force may be said to bind the University community, it is a dedication to that most nebulous and satisfying of pursuits, “the life of the mind.” Extracurricular activity at Chicago is an extension of that pursuit—a love for discovering the possible wherever it is to be found, in frivolity or seriousness, on the athletic field or in the library, at the bridge table or in political debate. As a consequence, "student activities" at the University are not simply the province of students but are a meeting ground for faculty, staff, and alumni alike.

Diversity in tastes and opinions is a hallmark of the University. A new student is almost certain to discover either a formal or an informal group that shares his interests, whether they run to chess, film, mountain climbing, judo, skiing, theater, or folk dancing. By the same token, social contacts are not forced, and one may strike out on the path of his choice. Typically, a student will identify less with his class or department than with a circle of friends who, in turn, will offer avenues to a wider range of activities and friendships. One finds few activities that attract huge numbers but a wealth of smaller gatherings reflecting the varied interests of the community.

The University has no central student union building; instead, there are a number of places where students gather for sustenance, amusement, and conversation. Ida Noyes Hall has meeting rooms, a small theater, a television lounge, and facilities for billiards, badminton, table tennis, and swimming. It is also the home of "The Frog and the Peach," an unabashedly eclectic café, and a pub that serves beer nightly and features pub concerts on weekends with local jazz and blues groups. The Reynolds Club offers lounges, billiards, and a student-run book and record shop; adjacent are Hutchinson Commons and the C-Shop, respectively the largest and the speediest dining rooms on campus. And there is "Jimmy's," a sprawling public tap just off campus, which has become a Hyde Park and University institution.

Many departments and Schools have their own lounges or coffee shops; for example, the "Nonesuch," the center for humanities students, and the "Swift Kick," the Divinity School coffee shop. Good talk and good cheer are periodically available at departmental sherry hours. Every Thursday afternoon students in the Graduate School of Business congregate for the "Liquidity Preference Function," a beer-and-pretzel gathering. The Law School holds an open "Wine Mess" each Friday.

Aficionados of film have an opportunity to indulge their tastes almost nightly. Doc Films, the oldest campus film society in the country, promotes American and foreign cinema; Contemporary European Films shows recent Continental releases; and Science Fiction Films promotes the study and delights of this branch of popular culture.

Music at Chicago attracts both participants and auditors. The University Symphony, Concert Choir, and Chamber Orchestra are all open to students by audition. The Concert Band performs out-of-doors in warm weather. Other groups include the Collegium Musicum, which re-creates ancient music; the Allegro Conspirito; the Musical Society; the Contemporary Chamber Players, and a number of ad hoc ensembles. Each January the Folklore Society holds a Folk Festival of growing national reputation. And the Rockefeller Chapel Choir, in addition to weekly services, performs five or six oratorios each year with members of the Chicago Symphony. Eleven "first chairs" of that great orchestra performed in University dormitories last year and lectured on their instruments. The entire orchestra came to the Quadrangles in the spring.
Chicago has no formal theater department, yet there is a tradition of innovative and exciting student theater and a remarkable list of actors who have come out of the University—Mike Nichols, Alan Arkin, Paul Sills, Fritz Weaver, and Will Geer among others. In an average year University Theatre stages perhaps twenty productions. Another student group, the Blackfriars, produces an original musical comedy each year, and the Renaissance Players...

revive fifteenth- and sixteenth-century drama each spring. Over the summer, Hutchinson Court becomes the al fresco stage for Court Theatre, a coalition of students, community residents, and professional actors who produce three plays during June, July, and August.

The plastic arts at Chicago are at their liveliest when the Joseph R. Shapiro Collection of over four hundred pieces of original contemporary art is loaned out at the beginning of each quarter—an event for which hundreds of students queue up overnight. With the recent completion of the Cochrane-Woods Art Center and Smart Gallery, the University's permanent collection is now on regular display. The enterprising will also find their way to the Art Department's Midway Studios on Sixtieth Street to inspect recent faculty and student work.

Each May students bring all the cultural threads of the University together in the annual Festival of the Arts, a month-long program of poetry readings, dance recitals and workshops, sidewalk chalk drawing, art exhibits, and musical events—all of which culminate in one last gala night complete with fireworks, searchlights, and the pealing bells of Rockefeller Chapel.
FOR A UNIVERSITY whose former president, Robert M. Hutchins, is rumored to have said, "When I feel like exercising, I lie down until the feeling goes away," Chicago shows a remarkable enthusiasm for athletics. Each year more than 3,800 students—about half of them graduate students—compete in twenty-two intramural sports. The most popular are basketball, softball, and touch football, although soccer, swimming, bowling, handball, squash, riffery, tennis, golf, and horseshoes draw enthusiastic participants. There are intramural activities for women in nine different areas: archery, badminton, basketball, bowling, jogging, table tennis, softball, swimming, and volleyball. In addition, men and women compete together in archery, badminton, horseshoe pitching, softball, and volleyball.

Most of the graduate departments and Professional Schools organize their own teams, often including faculty as well as students. In one recent year, for example, the English Department softball team—"The Fat City Nine"—included a professor of English, three assistant professors, and several graduate students.

Besides the profusion of intramural teams, there are clubs promoting cricket, judo, karate, squash, folk and modern dance, mountaineering, skiing, canoeing, and Rugby. Twenty-four tennis courts are scattered over the campus. The University's athletic fields and the Midway offer large grassy areas for ball playing, jogging, and even for following Mr. Hutchins' example.

The embodiment of intramural athletics at the University may be discovered in The University of Chicago Track Club. Organized over twenty years ago by Coach Ted Haydon and continuing under his direction, the UCTC brings together men and women of both average and exceptional ability, from within and outside the University, who share a desire for excellence in track and field. The Club counts among its triumphs both last-place finishers who have bettered personal records and the like of Rick Wohlhuter, who won an Olympic bronze medal in the 800-meter race in 1976.

Varsity athletics not only exist at Chicago but in many cases flourish. They do so, however, in the “Chicago style,” illustrated by the cheer: “Themistocles, Thucydides, the Peloponnesian War, X squared, Y squared, H₂SO₄, Who for, What for, Who we gonna yell for . . . MAROOONS!!”

The half-time entertainment at varsity football games has a distinctive Chicago flavor, featuring a 12-foot kazoo, an all-kazoo band, and, once, the crowning of a refrigerator as Homecoming Queen. The varsity basketball team, another of the twelve varsity teams at the University, went to a postseason NCAA tournament in 1974. Its captain broke the University’s all-time personal scoring record and won a national NCAA graduate fellowship—to The University of Chicago’s Graduate School of Business.
HYDE PARK

"HYDE PARK and The University of Chicago are practically inseparable. Faculty, University staff, married students, graduate and undergraduate students, alumni, and friends of the University are clustered about the campus in new and old houses, townhouses, and apartments. And a large percentage of the non-University residents of this interracial community are business and professional people."—IRA BACH, Chicago on Foot: Architectural Walking Tour.

Hyde Park is a residential community just 15 minutes south of Chicago's Loop. Flanked by Lake Michigan and two large parks, it is a sophisticated neighborhood with a long history of progressive thinking and social action. A politically independent community (Hyde Park elected the city's first independent alderman), it prides itself on the level of activity, political and social, generated by its residents. Neighborhood lore goes that if you put two Hyde Parkers in the same room you have an argument; three, a committee. Such a tradition is hardly surprising, in that some 70 per cent of the University's faculty and 95 per cent of its students live in the immediate Hyde Park—Kenwood area.

The community, integrated and stable, is cited as a model for other cities. The population of Hyde Park has stabilized at about 30 per cent black, 70 per cent white. Some twenty churches, synagogues, and other religious institutions are located in Hyde Park and adjacent Kenwood. Services are also held in Rockefeller chapel and in Bond chapel on the Quadrangles. Three large shopping centers, and several smaller ones, serve the neighborhood, with stores offering a wide range of products and prices, some at special student rates. Included is a cooperative market—the largest in the city—and Harper Court, a center for the community's artisans, craftsmen, and small businessmen. While ordinary products and services are easily available, Hyde Park is also a community where you can have a zither repaired, pick up a live lobster, rent an oil painting, buy your favorite brand of Japanese beer, or find a tutor in Swahili. If you're buying or selling secondhand goods, you can make good use of one of the public kiosks where hundreds of Hyde Parkers thumbtack their notices.

The crime rate is one of the lowest in the city. Incidents of the kind normally associated with urban living occur, however, and the University maintains a security force to help deal with these problems.

In sum, Hyde Park offers all the advantages and many of the problems of city living. But it is city living with a difference. Isaac Rosenfeld writes, in An Age of Enormity: "Nowhere else in a city of comparable size is there quite the same 'small town' feeling as in this [Hyde Park] community. It has a relatively rooted, peaceful look, and in some sections, an aged dignity far beyond its years."

"THAT TODDLIN’ TOWN"

"THE TYPICAL Chicagoan . . . has an irrational love for his city and a pride in it he can’t explain. He may occasionally grumble about conditions and he’s likely to be irritable during a siege of violent weather, but his complaining is not a symptom of chronic dissatisfaction; merely his annual mid-winter catharsis. The day the sun shines again, so does he, and his Chicago looks better than ever. It’s a great town, a great place to live—though if you ask him, he can’t tell you why.”—JORY GRAHAM, Chicago: An Extraordinary Guide.
Chicago may suffer from a "Second City" complex, but it is neither recreationally nor culturally deprived. Its Art Institute houses one of the world's great collections of French Impressionists and other masters. Igor Stravinsky once called the Chicago Symphony, third oldest in the country and currently under the direction of Sir Georg Solti, the finest in the world. The symphony's spring concerts at the University are invariably sold out.

The Lyric Opera offers a ten-week season in the autumn, and throughout the year Chicagoans can enjoy visiting performances by the nation's foremost ballet companies.

Professional theater is not strong, but, if one ventures beyond the Loop to Chicago's "off-Broadway," one can find dozens of exciting community and campus productions. A large number of movie houses show first-run films, and a smaller number offer underground, experimental, and foreign language films, revivals, and classics.

Summer in Chicago brings with it a wealth of cultural activities. Free open-air concerts by classical and jazz artists are presented summer evenings in the Grant Park Bandshell adjacent to Lake Michigan. The Ravinia Festival offers summer performances by the Chicago Symphony and ballet, jazz, and folk concerts in a lush park setting. Some Sunday afternoons the Chicago Chamber Orchestra gives free concerts alongside the lagoon in Jackson Park near the University.

Drama flourishes as the University's own Court Theatre, the Ravinia Theater, the Theater-on-the-Lake, and a variety of summer stock companies mount productions. June brings the Old Town and Fifty-seventh Street Art Fairs, followed in August by the Gold Coast Art Fair. Throughout the summer, street fairs blossom in Chicago's neighborhoods; some fairs are remarkable for their commercialism, others for the glimpses they offer into ethnic life.

The Museum of Science and Industry, a few blocks east of the University, demands comfortable shoes and lots of time for its fourteen acres of exhibits. The Field Museum of Natural History, a few miles to the north, is outranked only by the Smithsonian Institution and the American Museum of Natural History. The Shedd Aquarium, near the Field Museum, has the world's largest exhibit of marine and fresh-water creatures, and the adjacent Adler Planetarium offers an astronomical museum and a daily star show.

For entertainment: Rush Street is the nightclub district that caters to the convention crowd and offers some top-level performers. Old Town, on Chicago's North Side, has become commercial and overpriced, but a newly developing area nearby, dubbed New Town, offers interesting boutiques, shops, pubs, restaurants, and night spots.

Perhaps the most interesting areas, though, are the ethnic neighborhoods that have remained intact through the years. The Chinese, Greek, Italian, German, Lithuanian, and Mexican communities offer unpretentious but excellent restaurants, gourmet food stores, and specialty shops.

Within one to three hours' drive from the city there are a great many places to which one can go for a day’s or a weekend’s outing, ranging from the dunes of Indiana and Michigan (the Indiana state line is ten miles from Hyde Park via the Chicago Skyway) to the kettle moraine country of Wisconsin. The Mississippi River is two hours to the west of Chicago, Milwaukee is two hours to the north. (The corn belt and the coal belt lie south of the city, and the oil refineries of Hammond and the steel mills of Gary are to the southeast.)

Bicycle trails lead along the lakefront, through the prairies of the western suburbs, along the Skokie lagoons north of the city. The more ambitious cyclist can tackle some or all of the Wisconsin bicycle trail that goes along back roads from the Mississippi River at La Crosse to Lake Michigan at Kenosha.
Recreational opportunities in and around Chicago are only hinted at in these pages; the Chicagoan magazine, in its July 1974 issue, listed “700 ways to do the town”; and each Friday’s Sun-Times describes new places to go and things to do on the weekend.

Chicago is renowned for its vitality, for the breezes that blow along its lakefront, for the lakefront itself just a few blocks to the east of the campus. It is the only industrial city along the Great Lakes that has preserved its lakefront as open park along which the people may drive, stroll, swim, sail, bike, picnic, fish, or just take in the splendid view.

Chicago is, indeed, “that toddlin’ town” of the song which bears its name.
