and 1947 terms. In 1948 he was appointed to the faculty of the Northwestern University Law School. He remained at Northwestern until his appointment at Harvard in 1953, except for brief service as branch chief in the Office of the Chief Counsel of the Wage Stabilization Board and a stay at the University of Chicago Law School as Visiting Professor for the Summer Quarter, 1955.

Professor Allen has served as a consultant to various departments of the Illinois state government and as a member of the board of governors of the Metropolitan Housing and Planning Council of Chicago. He was chairman of the Advisory Committee of the Illinois Sex Offenders Commission in 1952-53. He is associate editor of the Journal of Criminal Law, Criminology and Police Science. He has published widely in a variety of fields, although his primary interests are in criminal law and constitutional law.

Alumni and Faculty Notes

The Honorable Harry Hershey, JD'11, is now serving as Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Illinois.

The president of the Association of American Law Schools, Maurice T. Van Hecke, of the University of North Carolina, and the president-elect, Philip Mechem, of the University of Pennsylvania, are graduates of the Law School. Professor Van Hecke is a member of the Class of 1917; Professor Mechem, of the Class of 1926.

Professor Harry Kalven, Jr., discussed the School’s Jury Project at a recent meeting of the Toledo Bar Association.

The School notes with regret the recent deaths of two distinguished alumni. Mr. Walter Hammond, of Kenosha, Wisconsin, was graduated from the Law School in 1916, after taking his undergraduate degree at Beloit College. He then entered upon the practice of law in Kenosha, where he remained until his recent death. Mr. Hammond, a member of Phi Alpha Delta, served as president of the Kenosha County Bar Association and, in 1941-42, of the Bar Association of the State of Wisconsin. He was also a director of the Kenosha Chamber of Commerce and was active in Kiwanis and in Boy Scout work.

Mr. Arthur E. Mitchell, JD'10, died recently in Knoxville, Tennessee. Mr. Mitchell received the Bachelor’s degree from Colorado College before coming to Chicago. Subsequent to his graduation he entered practice in Knoxville, which practice he maintained until his election as Chancellor of the Knox County Court in 1934. He served as Chancellor until his retirement in 1950, the longest tenure in the history of the court. Mr. Mitchell was for several years a member of the Knoxville School Board, serving as its chairman in the difficult days of the early 1930’s. He was also a trustee of Maryville College, which in 1947 awarded him the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws.

International Legal Studies

In the course of its work in international legal studies, The Law School has for many years conducted courses and seminars in comparative law. The Max Pam Professorship of Comparative Law was established in 1935. As a base for research in comparative law, the Comparative Law Research Center was established in 1948. Under its auspices the annotated translation of Max Weber’s Law in Society and Economy was published in 1954 and a study on Conflict Law in American Treaties in 1956. A major investigation into the relations between divorce laws and marriage stability is nearing completion. Since 1949, the School has been carrying on a special course of introduction to American law for foreign students. It is designed to take care of the needs of that steadily growing number of graduates of law schools of civil law countries who do not come to this country to prepare themselves for the practice of law in the United States. What these students want is, in a one year’s stay, to acquaint themselves with the methods of common-law thought and to obtain some knowledge of American law and institutions. When back home, they will then utilize their American experience in their work in their own laws and, perhaps, also in the conduct of legal business between their home countries and the United States. Students of this kind are strangers to those institutions of American social, economic, political, and cultural life which an American student has absorbed simply by living here. They are also unfamiliar with American university organization and American teaching methods. Many of them are specially interested in some particular field of American law such as trade regulations, corporation law, or the treatment of juvenile delinquency, which they cannot understand without some basic knowledge and training of a more general kind.

Such students are likely to waste all, or a considerable part, of the short time they have in this country, unless they receive understanding guidance as well as special introductory instruction. At The University of Chicago Law School the facilities offered to take care of these needs have so far been used by some seventy students coming from seventeen different countries.

In recent years a need has been recognized for American lawyers to acquaint themselves with the legal systems of civil law countries, both for practical purposes and as a method of enriching the understanding of American law, its possibilities of development, and its teaching. If an American law graduate goes abroad to study law in, let us say, Paris, he is likely to be as much at sea as the foreign law graduate here unless he is specially prepared and guided. To provide such preparation and guidance, the School now offers a Foreign Law Program, which extends over twenty-one months, the first nine months to be spent in residence at the University and the following twelve months in a foreign country.
